Nats Beat Chisox, 7-6, for 4th in Row

Marrero Hurls, Bats Washington To Victory

Relieves Steve Nagy In Second; Drives Winning Run Across With Hit in Fifth

By Shirley Povich
Post Reporter

Good neighbor Conrado Marrero of Havana, Cuba, extended a helping hand to the Nats last night and saw 'em to their fourth straight victory, the squeakiest kind of a 7-6 decision over the Chicago White Sox.

When little Marrero moved onto the scene in the second inning to relieve the faltering Steve Nagy, the Nats were a beaten ball club, trailing 5-1. He took hold, held the Sox to one run from that point, and personally drove in the Nats' winning run with a two-bagger in the fifth.

Stewart Comes Through

He had an assistant helper in Pinch-Hitter Eddie Stewart, who in that fifth inning tripled the tying two runs home with two outs, with a blast high off the right field wall.

Marrero had the help, too, of the zaniest kind of base running by the White Sox in the seventh, when Cass Michaels and Gus Zernial collaborated on a breath-taking boner that cost Chicago the tieing run.

Michaels was perched on first after his single to center with one out, when Zernial banged an enormous drive to center. As Irv Noren glided back to the wall, Michaels, believing the ball would be caught, tagged up at first for a dash to second. The hit landed high on the fence, and Michaels was still on first when Zernial turned for second, only to be declared automatically out for passing a base runner.

Eventually, Michaels reached second while Noren was tracking the ball down, but Marrero permitted no more liberties with his pitching in that inning.

Nats Tie For Third

The Nats hauled themselves into a third-place tie with the Yankees by their victory, and also exacted some revenge against Bob Kuzava, the Chicago lefthander who licked them four times last year without a defeat.

They blasted Kuzava out of the box with their five-hit, five-run fifth inning which pulled them out of a 6-2 deficit at that point. Eventually, Randy Gumpert was charged with the defeat.

Gumpert was in there when Stewart pinch hit for Grasso and tripled the tying two runs home. Then it was that Marrero won his own ball game. After Gumpert had a two-strike-no-ball count on him, the little Cuban dumped a short fly into center field that dropped safely when Busby failed at a shoestring catch attempt.

That fifth inning reconstructed: Dente walked, Noren beat out a surprise bunt down the third base line, Robinson forced Noren at second, Mele popped to Michaels. Tom O'Brien singled to left scoring Dente, and Merrill Combs singled to center scoring Robinson. Gumpert relieved Kuzava and Stewart.

President Hawks 'Big Dreams' Of Fair Deal Over Two States

ONE-TIME OPPONENTS MEET—Senator Glenn H. Taylor (right), Idaho Democrat who is expected to seek renomination, was among the first to greet President Truman when the presidential train pulled into Boise, Idaho, yesterday

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

Aboard Truman Train, May 10. President Truman today hawked the "big dreams and big plans" of the Fair Deal all over the States of Idaho and Oregon with all of the enthusiasm of the traveling salesman.

Continued prosperity, with the income of the average family doubled within 10 years, and atomic power harnessed for the welfare of all, was his answer to what he termed the "calamity howlers."

At Pendleton, Oreg., tonight, he wrapped up his economic report to Congress in language Western audiences can understand and told them not to heed those who see "nothing but gloom for the future."

Projecting his estimates, he envisioned by 1960 the lifting of the income of "every hard-working American family" from $2000 to $4000 a year.

He promised to balance the budget and cut taxes "just as soon as we safely can," but told the people of these wide-open spaces:

"I will not join in slashing Gov-

Rail Transport System Jolted As 18,000 Strike on 4 Lines

By Sam Stavisky
Post Reporter

The Nation's transport system was struck a jolting blow yesterday when 18,000 locomotive firemen struck against four major railroads.

The strike paralyzed, at least temporarily, the Southern Railway, the Pennsylvania, west of Harrisburg, the New York Central, west of Buffalo, and the Santa Fe.

Other railroads, particularly the Chesapeake and Ohio, were forced to cancel scheduled runs via the rails, stations and other facilities leased by the struck lines.

Should the strike of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen prove to be effective against the four lines—which carry an estimated one fifth of the Nation's carload freight and a third of all passengers, according to the Western Association of Railroads—thousands of workers in the railroads and rail-using industries will be thrown out of work for the duration of the walkout.

The four directly affected lines have made plans to lay off more than 100,000 nonstriking workmen. A firemen's brotherhood official calculated that as many as 400,000 workers in steel, coal, autos and other industries also faced the prospect of furloughs should the strike continue—and be effective for several days.

The impact of the strike was immediately felt in Cleveland yesterday, where the Fisher body division of General Motors and the Midland Steel Products Co. shut down because of the rail walkout and laid off 5000 employes.

Round-the-clock efforts of the

FEPC Shelved For Present By Coalition

By Mary Spargo
Post Reporter

By a vote of 50 to 22, a coalition of Republicans and Southern Democrats temporarily shunted aside discussion of the FEPC bill to take up President Truman's Reorganization Plan 12.

On motion of Senator Robert A. Taft (R. Ohio), the Senate turned to consideration of the plan to reorganize the National Labor Relations Board and abolish the semi-independent office of general counsel.

Unless the House or Senate acts adversely before May 23 the plan would automatically become law. Taft, coauthor of the Taft-Hartley Act, charged that Plan 12 is part of a general Administration drive to "nullify" the act.

The more than two-to-one vote came after Senate Democratic Leader Scott Lucas (D., Ill.) had pleaded with the Senate not to halt its debate on the question of taking up the Fair Employment Practices Commission measure.

Lucas said the House is slated to take up the NLRB plan today and he wanted "to save the Senate's time."

On the other hand Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R., Neb.), GOP whip, said that filing on Monday would be premature.

Senator Richard Russell (D., Ga.), floor manager for the Southern bloc against FEPC, said he would battle any attempt for a speedy

Senate Loyalty Committee Begins State Files Study

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

The Senate subcommittee charged with investigating disloyalty accusations against State Department personnel yesterday began the weary chore of examining the loyalty files of Senator McCarthy's famous "81 cases."

The task was begun in the Cabinet Room of the White House, to which the State Department brought the files. With the procedure the Senators adopted and at the rate they are going—each Senator decided to read each file, and they got through only a handful yesterday—the job may take two weeks.

Only four of the five subcommittee members fell to. The other, Senator Hickenlooper (R., Iowa), was in his home State yesterday, but plans to join his file-combing colleagues today.

McCarthy has charged that the files have been tampered with and "housecleaned," and that one of them has been "raped" of significant data.

But before he took his subcommittee into the inspection yesterday, Chairman Tydings (D., Md.) challenged McCarthy to prove the truth of those remarks.

"All he has to do," Tydings said, "is to lay the evidence before us and sustain it. We will put whoever is responsible in jail. Otherwise it's just a lot of hocus-pocus."

Tydings told reporters it was his understanding that the files contained not merely all the data gathered by State Department investigators, but also all the material on each person turned up by the FBI.

After two and one-half hours of studying the files, the subcom-

Sesqui Unit Votes to Drop Freedom Fair

By Thomas Winship
Post Reporter

The Sesquicentennial Commission's executive committee voted yesterday to abandon the Freedom Fair.

In a companion action, the group recommended at least $1,250,000 be "frozen" in the commission's reserve fund.

Congress last year appropriated three million dollars to underwrite the Capital's 150th anniversary celebration when the Freedom Fair was visualized as the most expensive feature of the program.

The full Sesqui commission is expected to indorse yesterday's recommendation at a meeting, probably early next week.

The fair's swan song was announced by Carter T. Barron, executive vice chairman of the Sesqui commission and a member of its executive committee, who said the recommendation stemmed from:

1. The Attorney General's ruling that a proposed nonprofit corporation could not be legally set up to run the fair.

2. The commission's inability to find a site which would be big enough to let industry run the show itself, with the major firms constructing their own buildings. The East Capitol st. site was considered too small to handle the problem on this basis.

Faulty Wording

Barron explained the adverse ruling on the nonprofit corporation stemmed from faulty wording in the original Sesqui commission bill, which failed to include provisions exempting the commission from the law forbidding Government corporations.

Only a few hours before yesterday's executive meeting, Leo Bernstein, local real estate man, wrote Barron offering 375 acres of land, rent free, for the fair grounds. The tract, it is understood, is situated five miles south of the District on Indian Head Highway.

Bernstein is said to hold controlling interest in the Sesquicentennial Leasing Bureau, which was to have sold Freedom Fair space to private firms on a 5 percent commission.

He and his partners are understood already to have invested about $30,000 in this business.

Offer Turned Down

Bernstein's land offer was turned down after the executive group had already decided to write off the exposition, Barron said.

The vice chairman emphasized repeatedly that the 1950 Sesqui program, including some 40 special exhibitions, observances and opening of the new amphitheater in Rock Creek Park July 4, "will go ahead unabated."

The Freedom Fair—exposition of industry and labor progress through the years and a concessions center—was scheduled to open April 15, 1951, and run through 1952.

Barron even hinted this year's Sesqui program might be expanded, with the financial responsibility of the Fair now virtually wiped out.

The plan to "freeze" $1,250,000 is subject to change. Sesqui officials explained it will take four or five days to determine the exact amount of their outstanding obligations for Freedom Fair plan-

French Plan Gets Backing Of Acheson

London, May 10 (AP).—France and the United States appeared to be strongly united tonight on a policy of tying Germany into western Europe industrially and politically.

There was doubt, however, as to Britain's attitude.

Secretary of State Dean Acheson issued a statement giving sympathy and approval to the "significance and far-reaching intent" of the surprise French offer yesterday to pool French, German and possibly other European coal and steel production.

This proposal dominated top-level diplomatic thinking today in London, where Acheson and British Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin held two long secret discussions on German and other phases of the cold war.

Acheson said of the French proposal: "It is plain from the announcement that the spirit prompting it was the furtherance of rapprochement between Germany and France and progress toward the economic integration of western Europe.

Long Favored By U. S.

"These are objectives which have long been favored by the Government of the United States."

He added, however, that "thorough analysis and final judgment" must await further development of the plan.

Thus, for the first time since the war, France and the United States appeared to be going into a Western Foreign Ministers' conference with common aims. The conference opens Thursday.

French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman arrived from Paris tonight.

British officials did not seem to share the enthusiasm of one American diplomat who commented that "this is the first time the French have taken the initiative in a major constructive fashion to solve the German problem."

A British Foreign Office spokesman danced all around the subject when questioned by reporters. Most of the British press expressed reserve toward the idea.

Addresses Pilgrims

In an address tonight before the Pilgrims, a society to foster American-British friendship, Acheson said both the United States and Europe must sacrifice some national interests to make the world secure against war.

Acheson said the job of bringing Germany back into the family of Western civilization "must be a cooperative enterprise in which the risks and responsibilities are shared by all."

Though remarking on the success of American economic aid to Europe, he said remaining troubles can be cured only through "cooperative international arrangements in which some sacrifices of

Majority of Pupils Watch TV Every Night, Survey Discloses

Nine out of 10 elementary schoolchildren in the District have television at their disposal, and two out of three watch as many as four programs a day.

These statistics, plus a comprehensive sampling of the effects of TV on children from kindergarten through the sixth grade, were revealed last night in a survey by Carl F. Hansen, associate superintendent of schools.

His findings and compilation of opinion among the children, their teachers and parents, were disclosed in a panel discussion of "Television and Its Effect on Our Children" at the thirty-seventh annual convention of the D. C. Congress of Parents and Teachers.

In his poll of 500 representative children in elementary schools, Dr. Hansen also discovered that:

1. Fifty-six percent of them have television sets in their own homes.

2. More than half watch television "to some extent" every night of the week.

3. Nearly one in three watch more than five programs during the afternoon and evening of a school day.

4. Twenty-six percent of 3691 children answering the question said they were allowed to stay up until 10 p. m. or later to view television.

5. Sixty percent of the children from 5 through 7 years of age "are staying up too late if 8 o'clock is a good bedtime."

6. Of 10 and 11-year-olds, 42 percent are permitted to stay up after 9 p. m.

7. Forty-nine percent of 546 teachers queried believe that TV is harmful to children, 44 percent said "no," and 7 percent had no opinion.

8. Sixty-four percent of the teachers have "seen significant evidence of harmful effects of TV. (Some teachers saw harmful effects to a few children but thought it did not justify a general conclusion.)

9. Yet 58 percent of the teachers answered "yes" to the question: "Have you reason to believe that children's present use of TV is contributing to educational achievement." (Teachers observed both harmful and beneficial effects within the same classroom.)

10. Ten percent of the teachers believe TV increases interest in reading.

The feeling among 54 parents who took part in the survey was overwhelmingly favorable.

All but nine said they believe TV is beneficial to their children. Six of these stated flatly that they

Text of French Proposal

Pooling Would Unify Europe And Keep Peace, Schuman Says

Details of the plan for the industrial unification of Europe, as set forth by Robert Schuman, the French Foreign Minister, were made public here last night by the French Embassy. Schuman made the statement in Paris on Tuesday. The text follows:

IT IS NO LONGER a question of vain words, but of an act, a bold act, a constructive act. France has acted and the consequences of her action may be immense. We hope that they will be.

France has acted essentially for peace. If peace is to have a chance, there must first of all be a Europe. Five years almost to the day after the unconditional surrender of Germany, France is taking the first decisive act in the construction of Europe and is associating Germany with it. This act must necessarily transform European conditions. This transformation will make it possible to take other common action that has been impossible until now. Out of all this will emerge a sound, united and strongly constructed Europe, a Europe whose standard of living will rise thanks to the pooling of production and the extension of markets, which will bring about a drop in prices. In this Europe, the Ruhr, the Saar and the French Basin will work together and their peaceful neighbors followed by United Nations observers will benefit all Europeans, Eastern as well as Western, and all lands, especially Africa, that look to the older continent for their development and prosperity.

Such is France's decision, and these are the considerations that inspired it: world peace cannot be safeguarded without creative efforts proportionate to the dangers that threaten it. The contribution that an organized and vital Europe can make is indispensable to the maintenance of peaceful relations. As the champion for United Europe for more than 20 years, France has always had one main objective: to serve the cause of peace. Europe has not been organized; we have had wars.

EUROPE will not be built at one stroke or by means of one over-all structure. It will be built, first by means of concrete steps that create real solidarity. The unification of the European nation demands that the age-old enmity of France and Germany be eliminated. The action undertaken must apply primarily to France and Germany. To this end, the French government proposes immediately to take action on a limited but decisive point. It proposes to place all French and German steel and coal production under a common high authority in an organization opened to the other European countries.

The pooling of coal and steel productions will insure the immediate establishment of common bases of economic development, the first stage in European federation and will change the destiny of these regions which have long been devoted to the manufacture of weapons of war, of which they themselves have been the most constant victims.

The solidarity of production thus established will prove that any war between France and Germany has become not only unthinkable but materially impossible. The creation of this powerful production pool opened to all countries that wish to participate in it and making available to all its members on the same conditions the basic necessities for industrial production will lay the real foundation for their economic unification. The output of this pool will be offered to the whole world without discrimination or exclusion as a contribution to the improvement of living standards and the advancement of peaceful enterprise. Europe will have increased means with which to promote the realization of one of her essential tasks; the development of the African continent.

THE FUSION of interests indispensable to the establishment of a broader and deeper community between countries that have long been kept apart by bloody conflicts will thus be realized simply and rapidly. By pooling their basic industries and establishing a new high authority whose decisions will be binding for France, Germany and the other participating countries, this proposal will lay the first concrete foundation of a European federation which is essential for the safeguarding of peace.

In order to work toward the realization of the objective defined above, the French government is ready to open negotiations on the following basis: the common high authority will be charged with insuring, in the shortest possible time, the modernization of production and the improvement of its quality, the supply of coal and steel on the same terms to the markets of France, Germany and other member-countries, the increase of joint exports, the improvement and equalization of the living conditions of the industrial workers in the participating countries.

Since production conditions are very different in the member countries, certain conditional measures must be adopted to achieve these objectives: the application of a production and investment plan, the establishment of mechanisms to equalize prices, and the creation of the reconversion fund to facilitate the rationalization of production. All custom duties on coal and steel between participating countries will be abolished immediately and the same railway freight rates will be applied. Gradually, conditions will be created which will automatically insure the most rational distribution of production at the highest level of productivity.

IN CONTRADISTINCTION to an international cartel which tends to divide and exploit national markets by restrictive practices and the maintenance of large profits, the proposed organization will assure the merging of markets and the expansion of production. The basic principles and engagements defined above will be the object of a treaty to be signed between the states and submitted to the Parliaments for ratification. The negotiations necessary to work out the measures of implementation will be carried on with the assistance of an arbiter designated by common agreement. It will be the arbiter's responsibility to see to it that the agreements reached are in conformity with the principles, and in case of a deadlock, he will decide upon the solution to be adopted. The common high authority responsible for the functioning of the whole organization will be composed of independent personalities designated on a party basis by the governments, and a president will be chosen by common agreement of the governments. This decision will be enforcible in France, Germany and the other member-countries. Appropriate provisions will insure the necessary means of appeal against the decisions of the high authority. A United Nations representative attached to this authority will make a report twice yearly to the United Nations Organization on the functioning of the new organization, especially with respect to the safeguard of its pacific aims. The establishment of the high authority in no way prejudices property rights in the enterprises concerned. In the exercise of its task, the common high authority will take into account the powers conferred upon the international authority for the Ruhr and the obligations of all kinds imposed upon Germany as long as these obligations subsist."

Leave Rider Wins; First Omnibus Bill Is Approved

Economy Bloc Wins Every Major Fight, Clips Measure by Estimated Billion

By Jerry Kluttz
Post Reporter

More than 200,000 Federal jobs would be abolished by economy amendments approved last night by the House in passing the 29-billion-dollar "one-package" appropriation bill.

The high-riding economy bloc won every major battle of the day and the bill was clipped an estimated billion dollars before it was sent to the Senate.

If the bill is approved as written, it will be the biggest blow to Federal employes since the Economy Act of 1933, when salaries, leave and jobs were slashed. And yesterday will go down as "Black Wednesday" for tens of thousands of Government workers.

Two Amendments

The two controversial amendments that would wipe out the jobs of an army of Federal people are:

1. The Taber-Thomas amendment to force most Federal agencies to get along with 10 percent less than the President's budget for salaries. The Defense agencies would be cut only 2 percent. The amendment directs agencies to save 600 million dollars, and most Government services would be cut by it.

2. The Jensen amendment to prohibit Federal agencies from filling more than 10 percent of their job vacancies during the 1951 fiscal year, which begins on July 1. It would apply to the Defense agencies.

In addition, the House approved a rider to require Federal workers to take annual leave as they earn it this year or else lose it.

Riders also were adopted to give the Secretaries of State and Commerce authority to fire employes under them summarily when they believe it to be in the best interest of the Nation.

No Estimate of Job Cut

Top personnel officials last night couldn't estimate how many jobs would be wiped out by the two major amendments other than to say the number would be "enormous." They did say that the Senate would be asked to kill the amendments.

They recalled that the President's budget provided for 28,000 fewer Federal jobs for the 1951 fiscal year, and that the last overall Government employment figure was 1,950,000.

The Taber-Thomas amendment would exempt only the medical staffs of the Veterans' Administration and the Public Health Service, which have about 125,000 jobs between them. The Defense agencies, with 745,000 jobs, would have to abolish about 15,000 jobs under the 2 percent cut.

All other agencies combined have about 1,200,000 employes, which would indicate a reduction for them of 120,000, or a total of

President Estime Of Haiti Resigns; Junta Takes Over

Port Au Prince, Haiti, May 16 (U.P.).—President Dumarsais Estime of Haiti resigned today as the climax of a four-day political crisis.

A military junta assumed power.

The crisis began last month when the Senate rejected a proposal by Estime's cabinet that the constitution be amended to enable the President to seek reelection in 1952. His term was due to expire in August, 1952.

Estime and his family were taken under the protection of the three-man junta consisting of Col. Frank Lavaud, Maj. Antoine Levelt and Maj. Paul Magloire.

[The Associated Press said the junta had dissolved Parliament.—Editor's note.]

The last six months of Estime's administration were marked by unrest with at least two attempts to overthrow or assassinate him.

On November 15, 1949, Estime declared modified martial law, dissolved three political parties, arrested eight opposition leaders, closed seven newspapers and set up news censorship.

On December 21, a plot to assassinate Estime and overthrow his regime, allegedly directed from the Dominican Republic, was smashed by the police.

Harris & Ewing
DR. ROY BLOUGH
. . . Named by President

President Truman yesterday designated Leon H. Keyserling, New Deal lawyer and economist, to be chairman of his Council of Economic Advisers.

At the same time, the White House announced that the President had nominated Dr. Roy Blough, 48-year-old University of Chicago professor, and formerly a Treasury tax research expert, to become the third member of the council.

There has been a vacancy on the CEA since last November 1, when Chairman Edwin C. Nourse resigned. Since then, Keyserling has been acting chairman. He was vice chairman since the inception of the CEA in 1946.

Yesterday's action also moves the other member of the council, John D. Clark, up to the position of vice chairman.

Keyserling, Nourse Differed

Keyserling has long stood in good favor at the White House. He would probably have been appointed chairman when Nourse resigned had not there been such a public hullaballoo at that time.

Nourse and Keyserling differed on many points; a major issue between them was whether the CEA should operate almost exclusively as confidential economic advisers to the White House, or whether its members should take to public and congressional fourms to battle for the Administration's economic programs.

Keyserling advocated the latter course, and the White House liked his aggressiveness. Furthermore it was convinced that the record showed his economic analyses and forecasts more nearly right than wrong.

Particularly, it welcomed Keyserling's insistence that it was not for economists to foreclose high military expenditures if the national defense situation demanded it.

Blough From U. of Chicago

Blough, the new member of the CEA, has been a professor of economics and political science at the University of Chicago since October, 1949. Previously he had been a faculty member in the graduate schools of public administration at the University of Cincinnati and Columbia University.

From 1938 to 1946, Blough was director of research in the Tax Division of the Treasury Department. From 1944 to 1946 he served as assistant to the Secretary of the Treasury. He is a native of Pittsburgh, Pa.

Keyserling's present views on the economic status of the nation, as he expressed them a few weeks ago to the President, are optimistic. When he presented the CEA's quarterly report to the White House he told reporters he believed the "strong" factors in the economy would persist through the third quarter of 1950. After that he declined to predict.

Veto of Flood Control Bill Is Indicated

Reports persisted yesterday that President Truman may veto the bill authorizing flood control and navigation projects estimated to cost $1,730,000,000.

Senator Magnuson (D., Wash.) said "there have been some hints that the bill might be vetoed."

He left Washington Tuesday night to join the President's train at either Pendleton, Oreg., or Pasco, Wash., yesterday, and confer with him.

"The President has the bill with him on his Western trip," Magnuson said. "And I have asked him to delay action until after I can confer with him. I understand the White House does not like the bill because the Senate failed to include in it the provision for setting up a Columbia basin account to handle the finances of the present and future projects in the Columbia River basin in the Pacific Northwest.

"I understand also that a provision for the Army Engineers to handle a reclamation project in Arkansas also has not met with White House approval."

Truman Signs Bill to Set Up National Science Foundation

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday signed a bill setting up a national science foundation to promote progress in science as a national policy.

He said the establishment of the foundation "is a major landmark in the history of science in the United States."

In a 600-word statement issued from his Western tour, he said scientific knowledge is "indispensable to our continued growth, prosperity and security."

Must Hold Lead, He Says

He added it was not enough for the United States to keep abreast of the rest of the world, "we must maintain our leadership."

"We have come to know that our ability to survive and grow as a nation depends to a very large degree upon our scientific progress."

The legislation provides for a 24-member board to supervise the letting of research contracts and the awarding of fellowships and scholarships. The operating head of the foundation will be a $15,000-a-year director to be appointed by the President.

The foundation is to cooperate with the Defense Department and the Atomic Energy Commission.

For the first year, the bill authorizes a $500,000 appropriation for the foundation's work, with 15 million dollars annually thereafter. However, separate legislation actually providing the money is necessary.

Before sending the bill to the White House, Congress struck out a controversial provision that would have required the FBI to pass judgment on the loyalty of persons employed by the foundation or receiving scholarships.

The stated objective of the new legislation is:

1. To develop and encourage the the pursuit of a national policy for the promotion of basic research and education in the sciences.

2. To initiate and support basic scientific research through contracts or other arrangements, and to appraise the impact of research upon industrial development and upon the general welfare.

3. To initiate and support (after consultation with the Secretary of Defense) scientific research in connection with matters relating to the national defense through contracts and other arrangements.

4. To grant scholarships and graduate fellowships in the sciences.

5. To foster the interchange of scientific information among scientists in the United States and foreign countries.

6. To correlate its research programs with other scientific research programs of individuals and public (including Federal governmental) and private groups, as well as to evaluate such other programs.

3 Women Aides of U. S. Unit Held 24 Hours by Berlin Reds

Berlin, May 10 (U.P.). — Three women employes of the American Friends' Service Committee were released today after being held incommunicado for 24 hours by Communist police in Berlin's Russian sector.

The three prisoners—Anne Bennett of Maumee, Ohio; Marilyn Seefield of Seattle, and Maria Douglas of Lisburn, Northern Ireland—were held until Red authorities had developed the photographs they had taken of Berlin war ruins and found no "military objectives" were included.

Russian officials had denied for hours any Americans had been arrested.

Miss Bennett said the prisoners "could not have had better treatment" although they had to sleep last night on chairs in a police station.

The women said they were treated courteously and asked only a few "very, very mild" questions.

They were riding down East Berlin's Friedrich Street in an International Refugee Organization vehicle when they stopped to snap pictures of war ruins adjoining a police station.

U. S. Gypsum Votes Extra

Soviet Delegate Quits Meeting of Red Cross

Geneva, Switzerland, May 10 (AP). Russia's delegate walked out of a meeting of the League of Red Cross Societies executive committee today because the committee refused to approve a formal exclusion of any representative from Nationalist China.

The committee met under the chairmanship of Basil O'Connor of the American Red Cross, to study relief action in Palestine and repatriation of Greek children in eastern Europe.

Rules Unit Expected to Kill House Payroll Investigation

By the United Press

Chairman Adolph J. Sabath (D., Ill.) yesterday said he believed his House Rules Committee will reject a proposed investigation of congressional payrolls and alleged salary kickbacks.

He made the statement after the committee wrangled privately over the proposal, offered by Representative Usher L. Burdick (R., N. Dak.) to set up a special committee to check House and Senate payrolls.

Burdick was supposed to have testified at an open hearing yesterday, but the committee did not call him. Sabath was said to have told the members that he had promised Burdick a hearing and that he would keep it. Burdick may appear today.

Several members were understood to have objected strongly to the proposal on grounds that payroll informatio nalready is open to the public. One member, it was said, described the proposal as an "insult to Congress."

Sabath said the exchange of sentiments indicated to him that a majority of the committee would vote against the proposal.

saw "no value for their children in present programs." Three recognized "some entertainment value, but were not enthusiastic about that."

The most frequently mentioned benefit was that television has stimulated "keen interest in news, scientific and travel programs . . . and has extended the interests of children."

Members of the panel, of which American University President Paul F. Douglass was moderator, included Dr. Hansen; Dr. L. D. Folkemer, director of religious activities at George Washington University; Dr. Thomas A. Harris, head of the neuro-psychiatric branch of the Navy Bureau of Medicine and Surgery; Dee W. Schools Fail to Teach Essentials, Marvin Says

Students entering college frequently do not know how to read, write or spell, George Washington University President Cloyd Heck Marvin declared yesterday.

He told the opening session of the two-day convention of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers that public schools are failing to teach children essential disciplines.

He urged them to let their children have the opportunity to learning the "discipline of work" by taking jobs outside school hours.

"We let our children out to play on poorly supervised playgrounds or let them run loose on the streets," Dr. Marvin said.

Rules Group Clears Draft Extension Bill

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Extension of the draft act and two other major defense bills were apprvoed by the House Rules Committee yesterday for early floor action.

The measures would:

(1) Continue the selective service law for another two years, with provision that no one actually could be inducted until Congress declares a national emergency to exist. Meanwhile, draft machinery would continue operating as far as registration, physical examinations and classification are concerned.

(2) Authorize a $350,000,000 start on modernization of the Navy. The bill provides for building an atomic-powered submarine and three other radically new types of submarines and converting a heavy cruiser into a guided missile warship.

Military Construction

(3) Authorize about $592,000,000 in construction at military, naval and air bases in this country and overseas. As originally approved by the House Armed Service Committee, the bill called for $97,000,000 more to build quarters for servicemen's families in continental United States. This was eliminated Tuesday to meet Rules Committee objections.

Chairman Carl Vinson (D., Ga.) of the Armed Service Committee yesterday asked the rules group—which passes on what legislation may be called up in the House—to clear the three measures and they received quick endorsement.

Elimination of the domestic housing from the construction bill will prevent some badly needed quarters being built at the Quantico, Va., Marine base and other military posts in the area. Vinson said, however, that the funds were needed for more pressing military purposes and declared construction under the Wherry Act could fill the need.

Private Building Operations

Under the latter, private constructors may build homes on military reservations for occupancy by Service families.

The draft extension bill drops the feature of the original act under which 18-year-olders could volunteer for a year's training in the United States and then join the National Guard or Reserves. It also limits the President's power to call reserves to duty or seize industry needed for mobilization. Like inductions, the President could not act until Congress has declared a national emergency.

Vinson said he hopes to call up all three bills as soon as the omnibus appropriation bill is passed.

Reorganization

13 Generals Given New Posts in AF

The Air Force yesterday announced a reorganization of two key departmental divisions and shifted 13 generals to new posts.

Gen. Ramey

Maj. Gen. Roger M. Ramey, now commander of the Strategic Air Command's Eighth Air Force at Carswell AF Base, Fort Worth, Tex., will report here next month to take a new post of director of operations for the Air Force.

He will be replaced in command of the big B-36 bombers by Maj. Gen. Samuel E. Anderson. Anderson has been serving as director of plans and operations in the office of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Operations.

Duties Are Divided

Air Force officials said Anderson's post had proved too much for one man, and that it will be split in two. Maj. Gen. Truman H. Landon, formerly Air Force member of the Joint Strategic Survey Committee under the Joint Chiefs of Staff, will become director of plans.

At the same time, it was announced that the Air Force directorate of public relations is being switched from the office of the Secretary of Air Force to the office of the Chief of Staff, Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg.

Brig. Gen. Sory Smith, who has been deputy director of public relations, will become USAF public relations chief. Stephen F. Leo, who has been Air Force public relations director, transferred to a similar job at the National Security Resources Board when Air Force Secretary W. Stuart Symington became chairman of the board.

Nils A. Lennartson, also a deputy to Leo, will continue as deputy to Smith. The latter is a veteran pilot who served with the Ninth Air Force during the war.

Other Generals Affected

Other Air Force generals are affected by the transfers.

Maj. Gen. Robert M. Webster, commander of the Eastern Air Defense Force at Mitchel Field, Hempstead, N. Y., was named chief of the air section with the joint Brazil-United States military commission at Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. His replacement has not been named.

Maj. Gen. John M. Weikert, chief of staff of the Far East Air Forces, will become commandant of the Air Tactical School at Tyndall Base, Florida, on August 5. He will be replaced by Maj. Gen. Laurence C. Craigie, commandant of the Air Force Institute of Technology at Wright-Patterson Field, Dayton, Ohio.

Maj. Gen. Grandison Gardner will replace Craigie at Dayton. He is now president of the Air Force Base Development Board in Washington.

Maj. Gen. Thomas D. White has replaced Landon on the strategic survey committee. He was formerly director of legislation and liaison in the office of the Air Force Secretary.

White has been replaced by Maj. Gen. William E. Hall, former deputy director of legislation and liaison.

Brig. Gen. Alfred R. Maxwell, chief of stag of the Twentieth Air Force, has been assigned to the Research and Development Command, effective July 1.

Brig. Gen. Charles Y. Banfill, deputy commander of the Armed Forces Staff College at Norfolk, Va., will become Twentieth Air Force chief of staff with headquarters on Okinawa, August 5.

Brig. Gen. Robert C. Candee, comptroller of the Continental Air Command, will replace Banfill at the Armed Forces Staff College.

White House Souvenir Disposal Advice Asked

The Commission on the Renovation of the White House would like Congressment and Senators to tell them what to do with salvage "souvenirs" from the White House remodeling project.

Maj. Gen. Glen E. Edgerton, executive director of the commission, revealed yesterday that a "circular" leter has been sent the lawmakers asking them to report back on the needs of museums and organizations in their constituencies.

The members of Congress were asked to reply by June 15.

Silver Spring Man Escapes From Hospital

Donald S. Garriss, 26, of 910 Heron ct., Silver Spring, escaped from the Perry Point Veterans Hospital yesterday.

He is under indictment for armed robbery of the liquor store of Sherlock Harrison, Muirkirk, Md., last February 15. He was brought to the hospital for observation. Garriss was described as "potentially dangerous." He outran six attendants after breaking away from a meal formation.

Princess of Iran and Her American Husband Wed Again in Glittering Moslem Ceremony

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MOSLEM RITES—Rita Hayworth (left) actress wife of Prince Aly Khan chats with Iranian Princess Fatima and her bridegroom, Vincent Lee Hillyer of Los Banos, Calif., in Paris yesterday at the Moslem wedding of the couple. The couple were first married in a civil ceremony in Rome early in April. Rita, at the wedding, said she may become a Moslem

Paris, May 10 (AP).—Princess Fatima of Iran and her American husband, Vincent Lee Hillyer, cemented their marriage in the graces of Iranian royalty today by being wed a second time at a glittering Moslem ceremony.

Hillyer, a 25-year-old writer from Los Banos, Calif., gave up his Roman Catholic religion for love of the pretty sister of Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlevi and became a Moslem last Sunday.

An official Iranian source said the bride, 21, was restored automatically to her royal position by the marriage. She will be known as "Her Royal Highness the Princess Fatima Pahlevi." Her husband will remain "Mr. Hillyer," or perhaps "His Excellency, Mr. Hillyer," the source said.

Angered at the first marriage, a town hall ceremony April 13 at Civitavecchio, Italy, the Shah had stripped his youngest sister of her royal prerogatives, but promised forgiveness if she went through the Moslem religious rite.

The Moslem ceremony was conducted at the Iranian Embassy.

Princess Fatima was gowned in white satin, with a white net vell and a small white brocaded hat. She had a boquet of white lilies and wore a large diamond ring.

Maggy Rouff, Paris dressmaker who made the gown, said one like it would cost $570.

Hillyer wore a morning coat and striped pants.

Film actress Rita Hayworth, who went through a similar ceremony last year with Moslem Prince Aly Khan, attended with her father-in-law, the Aga Khan. Reared as a Catholic, she told reporters she is studying the Moslem religion and probably will adopt it. She repeated denials of a recent rumor that she and Aly might be divorced.

The Aga Khan, wealthy spiritual leader of the Ismaili Moslems, was an official witness.

Czech Given Death Verdict As 'U. S. Spy'

Prague, May 10 (AP).—A Czech, charged with spying for the United States Embassy here and conducting subversive activity, was sentenced to death and two others, including a Roman Catholic priest, have been sentenced to life imprisonment by a Slovak state court, the Slovak newspaper Pravda reported today.

Verkoslav Lutsky was sentenced to die for his alleged connection with Maj. Jaromir Nechansky, British-trained parachutist, who was recently sentenced to be hanged on charges of leading a big American-directed spy ring. Lutsky had appeared as a witness in Nechansky's trial in Prague.

Sentenced to life imprisonment were Father Tomira and O. Holman. The two were also fined 50,000 crowns ($1000) and their property was ordered confiscated.

The court—in Horni Litvinov, Slovakia—sentenced 21 other Czech to prison terms ranging from 9 months to 26 years for their activities with the alleged spy ring.

Father Tonira was said to have used religious preachings to incite the Czech people against the present regime, and to have recruited numerous members into the espionage organization.

Besides charges of espionage, Holman was also acused of causing the death of a Russian partisan.

Peasant Union Asks Big 3 To Seek Satellites' Freedom

By Edwin D. Gritz
Post Reporter

The International Peasant Union last night concluded a three-day congress which amounted to a bid for world recognition as Eastern Europe's greatest hope against Stalinism.

In speeches and resolutions, Iron Curtain exiles of known political strength emphasized that "peasants are decided ideological antagonists of communism" and present "the fundamental factor for communism's eventual downfall . . ."

The Moscow-outlawed agrarians pointed up the underlying theme of the convention by sending a cable to the Western "Big Three" foreign ministers in London asking that they consider "the problem of the restoration of the freedom and independence of the countries behind the Iron Curtain."

In several related resolutions, members of the "Green International" stressed that they represent the majorities of the populations behind the Iron Curtain and disclosed that efforts are being pressed "to effect the collaboration of all democratic political organizations . . . to secure the success of the struggle for liberation . . ."

This struggle, officials later disclosed, has been admittedly sporadic up to recent months although the union was formed July 4, 1947. Now, however, organized political activity against communism is achieving noteworthy results.

The union was brought into a single political force strong elements from Estonia, Lithuania, Poland, Czechoslovakia (Czech and Slovak units), Romania, Hungary, Bulgaria, Yugoslavia (Serb-Croat units) and, yesterday, Albania.

Although the union has already won tacit approval from the State Department, it's greatest support comes from Europe's multiple right-wing or mildly socialist elements.

European observers have attached much importance to the activities of the Peasant Union, viewing it as a real and not theoretical "third force" in Europe together with the Committee of the International Conferences of the Socialist Parties (Comisco).

Like Comisco, the peasant movement is right-wing or mildly socialist although Comisco has been directing its efforts during the past two years toward organizing urban or working classes.

At the Pleasant Union Congress, held in the National Press Club, members reelected Stanislaw Mikolajczyk as president, and chose the following vice presidents: Vladko Macek, former vice premier of Yugoslavia; Ferenc Nagy, former premier of Hungary; Milan Gavrilovic, former Yugoslav minister of interior; and Augustain Popa, former Romanian political leader. Secretary general is Dr. George M. Dimitrov, Bulgarian agrarian leader.

Loading Platform Dumps Three in Freak Accident

Three persons were slightly hurt in a freak accident yesterday.

Police said a track welder left a metal plate lying between the track and a loading platform, near 9th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw., when Robert C. Hamer, 48, of 4901 41st st. nw., started up his streetcar, the plate caught in the undercarriage, jammed against the loading platform, and swung the platform 3 feet from its normal base.

The three persons were tossed from the platform to the pavement. They were listed as Romie Bocock, 48, of 800 Crittenden st. nw., and Bessie Lappen, 48, of 3620 16th st. nw., both of whom suffered cuts and bruises; and Ida Jacobs, 50, of 1315 Allison st. nw., who suffered shock. They were treated at Emergency Hospital.

Police said streetcar traffic was tied up nearly an hour by the mishap.

Russian Offer On Lend-Lease Debt Rejected

By the United Press

The United States has rejected an offer by Russia to settle its lend-lease account for two cents on the dollar, it was reported yesterday.

Both sides were described as "far apart" in their three-year-old negotiations to reach a settlement on the 11 billion dollar in lend-lease goods sent to Russia during World War II.

State Department officials said Russia has made several proposals for "token" payments. All have been rejected. One was said unofficially to be an offer to pay 200 millon dollars.

The United States is not attempting to collect for all the lend-lease shipments to Russia. But the Soviet Union was supposed to pay for items left over after the war if they had peacetime value.

This country is believed to be seeking one billion dollars in payments.

Bomb 'Need' in War II Stressed

Albuquerque, N. Mex., May 10 (AP).—Dan A. Kimball, Undersecretary of the Navy, today disputed the idea that Japan was ready to quit fighting before the United States dropped atom bombs on two Japanese cities.

The Navy official made no direct reference to contentions by Rear Admiral Ellis M. Zacharias, former deputy director of Naval Intelligence, that the atomic bombing of Japan was unnecessary.

But, in a speech prepared for delivery before the Albuquerque Kiwanis Club, Kimball declared:

"Knowing what we do now, we are quite sure that, had it not been for the A-bombing of Hiroshima and Nagasaki, we would have had to fight the Jap military hand-to-hand on his own soil in order to force a decision."

Zacharias, who is now retired, says in an article in Look magazine that information that reached Naval Intelligence showed clearly that Japan was ready to surrender before the A-bombs were dropped. He says the intelligence most readily accepted by the United States authorities was prepared by the War Department. And he declares that the late President Roosevelt, President Truman, former Secretary of War Stimson and Gen. George C. Marshall had to make crucial decisions "without knowing some of the war's most vital nonmilitary information."

Kimball said atomic forces, first loosed in weapon form at the White Sands proving ground in New Mexico, "provided the decisive final punch needed to put Japan out of the war."

The Navy official said the inclination of Americans is to turn from weapons to devote themselves to more constructive scientific implications of atomic development.

"But wishful hoping will not make a stable peace," he declared.

Marital Problem Proposal Revived

President John L. Laskey of the District Bar Association yesterday revived efforts to improve the handling of domestic relations and divorce cases in local courts.

Less than 24 hours after the association voted down a proposal for a "marital affairs counsel" to replace the present domestic relations commissioner, Laskey appointed a new committee to develop an alternate plan.

He named as chairman Arthur J. Hilland, the only one of nine members of a special bar association committee who oposed the "friend of court" plan now operating in Detroit and recommended by three District Court judges for the District of Columbia.

Committee Rebuffed

Despite the committee's indorsement of the marital-affairs counsel proposal, which was strongly urged for the District by Chief Justice Bolitha J. Laws, the bar group on Tuesday night refused by a heavy majority to support it.

Laskey wrote Hilland that "throughout the majority and minority committee reports . . . and the debate on [the] proposal, there appeared to me to be a unanimous opinion that there was a need for some improvement in the handling of domestic relations cases."

Denies Indifference

He said the association's action did not "indicate an attitude of indifference." Rather, the interest aroused showed "an awareness on their part of a need for revision of the present method of handling this type of case. . . ."

With Hilland on the committee "to study procedure and to suggest recommendations for improvement," Laskey appointed John Alexander and John J. Carmody, both of whom spoke in favor of the "friend of court" plan before the group; Jean Boardman and H. Mason Welch, both of whom argued against it; DeWitt S. Hyde, John J. O'Brien, Rolland G. Lamensdorf, Roger Robb, and Mrs. Una Rita Morris.

Laskey said he would be "glad" to make other appointments at Hilland's suggestion.

Bar Voting On Admission Of Negroes

The District Bar Association is conducting a referendum among its members to determine whether the organization should admit Negroes, President John L. Laskey said yesterday.

Sealed ballots have been mailed to the membership, he said, at the order of the association's board of directors. Voting is anonymous.

The action was taken last month, Laskey said, after members began circulating petitions to change the by-laws so that all racial groups could obtain membership.

The ballots must be postmarked May 20 and returned to the association's office. Those conducting the referendum will report directly to the board of directors, who will then probably notify the membership of the vote, Laskey said.

I bank by auto at NATIONAL CAPITAL

"And I consider myself a smart businessman! Before National Capital opened their combination 'Drive-in, Walk-Up' banking service, I needed two men to do my banking. One man had to drive around the block while the other waited around at the window. Now with this revolutionary service, one man accomplishes in seconds what used to take two men 25 or 30 minutes to do. This means a double saving for me in these days of high labor costs when time means money.

"Drive-in banking is safer too. No waiting around with large sums of money in your possession. And the National Capital Bank has installed a night depository for the convenience of firms that must heed irregular banking hours.

200,000 U. S. Job Cut Voted As House Passes Funds Bill

135,000 under the Taber-Thomas amendment.

This sweeping amendment, if it stands, would force most agencies to make reductions in personnel about July 1, the start of the new fiscal year. About 10,000 employes here would have their jobs threatened by it.

The successful turnover amendment, offered by Representative Jensen (R., Iowa), would limit most Federal agencies to the filling of only one of every 10 vacancies.

"Painless," Jensen Says

Jensen, who estimated his provision would save an estimated 400 million dollars, told the House it would be a "painless" way of reducing Federal employment. He said employe turnover was running 2 percent a month, or 24 percent a year.

The Civil Service Commission officially estimates 310,000 Federal jobs will be vacated for one reason or another during the 1951 fiscal year. The Jensen turnover amendment would apply to about half of them, and, on paper, it would appear that another 135,000 Federal jobs are threatened by it.

However, the Taber-Thomas and the Jensen amendments would partly offset each other. As employes are fired under Taber-Thomas, their jobs couldn't be filled under the Jensen provision. On the other hand, the Jensen amendment would cut deeper as the fiscal year wears on and as employes leave their jobs for whatever reason.

All in all, 200,000 appears to be a conservative estimate of the number of jobs that would be abolished by both amendments by June 30, 1951, the end of the 1951 fiscal year.

The Jensen amendment would exempt these jobs:

Medical jobs in VA and Public Health, scientific and technical jobs in the Atomic Energy and armed forces, law enforcement officers; temporary, seasonal and cooperative jobs, and all jobs in the legislative and judicial branches, and in the District government.

Cuts in 1951 Budget

The Taber-Thomas amendment would cut Government services up and down the line. It directs that the following cuts be made in the President's 1951 budget.

The bill carries 319 million for travel and this item would be cut 5 percent for military personnel and 20 percent for civilian travel.

The Defense agencies would have to cut transportation 5 percent; other agencies 10 percent. A total of 720 million is carried in the bill for transportation.

For communications, the bill provides 59 million. The Defense would have to save 5 percent, other agencies 10 percent. All agencies, except Defense, would have to save 10 percent of their allotmentof the 205 million carried in the budget for rent and utilities. All agencies would have to save 10 percent of the 52 million for printing and reproduction.

A 10 percent saving would have to be made by all agencies, except Defense, in the $1,301,000,000 provided for contractual services. A similar saving would have to be made in the budget item of $3,577,000,000 for equipment, Defense again excepted.

The budget carries $3,888,000,000 for supplies and materials. All agencies would have to save 10 percent of their allotment except Defense and VA.

Questions Saving

Chairman Cannon of the House Appropriations Committee, questioned whether the Taber-Thomas amendment would save the 600 million dollars as estimated. He pointed out that his committee had already made cuts in many of the above items, and that the rider would apply only to the estimates for these services in the President's budget.

Nevertheless, the amendment directs agencies to save 600 million dollars. If the specific cuts outlined above don't total that amount, they would have to be made up elsewhere.

Representative Albert Thomas (D., Tex.) started the economy ball rolling when he proposed a half-billion slash in the budget. Representative Taber (R., N. Y.) amended the Thomas amendment to provide the 600-million slash with details on how the savings would be made. In a roll-call vote, the Taber-Thomas amendment was carried by an overwhelming vote of 274 to 112.

Chairman Cannon (D., Mo.) was defeated when he sought to get the House to vote to give the Budget Bureau authority to withhold 5 percent of the monies carried in the bill for administrative expenses—funds that could be released if the Budget director certified they were necessary for Federal operations.

The Jensen amendment carried on a roll call vote of 201 to 185.

The House also voted 222 to 163 to sustain an earlier cut from $11,700,000 to $8,750,000 in the administrative funds of the Public Housing Administration. By a vote of 145 to 137, it knocked out an increase in funds for maritime training, and by a final vote of 258 to 131, the House approved its earlier action to boost from 75 to 150 millions a hospital building fund for Public Health.

A roll call vote was refused by the House on a motion by Representative Bates (D., Ky.) to restore the 10 percent cut in the Federal grant to the District.

Race Betting Tax Plan Rejected by House Committee

The House Ways and Means Committee yesterday rejected a proposal to put a 70-million to 80-million-dollar-a-year Federal excise tax on horse race betting.

The proposal would have imposed a 5 percent tax on the approximately $1,500 million bet annually through pari-mutuel machines. The Administration had made no recommendation on such a tax.

A committee spokesman said the proposal was rejected primarily because the committee members did not want the Federal Government to encroach on this source that is used by some States to get a substantial part of their revenue.

Also, it was pointed out that no such proposal was made during the long committee hearings on tax legislation.

The committee now is seeking to find new revenue sources to offset cuts of over one billion dollars it wants to make in excise taxes. President Truman has warned that this must be done or he will veto the tax bill.

Judge to Set Aside Absentia Verdict

Judge James W. Morris decided in District Court yesterday that an "in-absentia" conviction for housebreaking and larceny may not stand against Albert R. Jackson, 32, of 432 New York ave. nw.

The judge announced yesterday he will set aside the guilty verdict and order a new trial—if he receives evidence that Jackson was absent involuntarily during the latter part of his trial.

Jackson is now in jail at Chester, Pa. Unofficial sources said he went there Monday night, after the first day of his trial, in search of a friend who was indicted on the same charges he was. He found the friend, who had previously jumped $3500 bond here, and both were jailed. But Jackson couldn't get back, his acquaintances said, to face the prosecutor, witnesses, and jury.

Rail Strike Hits D. C. Area Slowly

Slowly and with confusion, Washington yesterday began to feel the first bite of the rail strike.

Passenger transportation was the first casualty. Airlines reported an unprecedented rush for reservations, bus lines were waiting for their difficulties to begin, and the American Automobile Association said many travelers—unable to go by train—would take to driving instead.

Transportation of coal and heavy equipment from the coal and steel regions of the near-Midwest was cut to a "trickle."

But the General Services Administration, the Government's quartermaster, reported a 30-day stockpile of coal in Washington. Potomac Electric Power Co. said it has a 90-day supply.

Coal could not be expected to come into Washington in any appreciable quantity, these sources said, so long as the Pennsylvania Railroad and Chesapeake & Ohio lines—major coal carriers—were struck.

"It all boils down," a Government official said, "to the simple fact that if nothing is moving, nothing is moving."

A private industry observer said that "Washington ought to be glad this strike didn't take place during the cold weather."

The Post Office Department and such freight-forwarding agencies as Railway Express were re-routing their shipments as much as possible, they said.

In some cases mail may be delayed. The Postoffice cited such points as Detroit, Charlotte, Lynchburg, and Greensboro, with service both to and from Washington affected.

Detroit mail, for example, has to be sent to Chicago via an unstruck line and sent from there to Detroit.

Mail trucks will be used wherever possible and whenever necessary to reach struck sections.

"But all the mail is moving," a postal aide emphasized.

Railway Express was refusing shipments, it said, to any point that could be reached only by the Southern Railway or via the Pennsylvania, west of Harrisburg. Otherwise, shipments will be rerouted along alternate railroads. Some delays can be expected.

Since most perishable goods—except for large carload lots—are already being sent by truck, Washington is in no danger of finding itself without produce and dairy products.

But trucking associations in Washington and the Nation expected large-scale increases in their shipping volume. Once traffic is more than the trucking facilities can take, perishable stuffs and drugs probably will take priority over nonessential shipments, truckers said.

The difficult question for all sources to answer was how serious the effects would prove if the strike continues. Some sources thought their troubles would "snowball."

Hotels in Washington, as an example, reported few cancellations yesterday. They just didn't know what the rest of the week would bring.

Department stores and large specialty shops saw no immediate danger of having only shelves to show their customers since most of their products come from New York. Yet delivery by mail—parcel post in particular—might turn into a problem, they said.

Meantime, air lines reported an increasing call for shipments by plane. How telephone calls for reservations could possibly increase they didn't know.

A TWA official said it took him nearly 10 minutes to get a reply from a reservation clerk. That line, Eastern, and Capital were flying extra sections to Midwest and near-Midwest points.

Rail Transport System Jolted As 18,000 Strike on 4 Lines

National Mediation Board, led by Chairman Francis O'Neill, to prevent the strike, and then to end it quickly after the 6 a. m. (standard time) deadline, failed to break through the long-standing deadlock between the firemen and railroads over the strike issue.

Second Fireman Demanded

The firemen's brotherhood has been demanding that the railroad employ two firemen, instead of one as now, on multiple-engine diesel locomotives as a safety measure. The Nation's rail companies have rejected the demand on the ground that an additional fireman was unnecessary, and have twice been upheld by presidential fact-finding boards.

There were indciations yesterday that the union and four roads were close to a compromise settlement of the strike issue, but nothing came of the reports.

The union announced at a press conference after mediation broke down that it had modified its demand, asking for the second fireme only on high-speed, streamlined, through passenger service. This offer, too, was rejected by the railroads, according to the union.

The members of the National Mediation Board stayed on in Chicago last night, after reporting to Presidential Assistant John Steelman at the White House. The action indicated the board would continue its efforts to find a peace formula, rather than dump the problem at the White House door.

In some quarters it was believed that the President had the power to halt the strike by court injunction or seizure of the lines. Other observers, however, questioned whether the White House would or could take such drastic action in view of the fact that the union had struck only a part of the rail system.

"Hill" Demands Spurred

The strike stimulated new demands on Capitol Hill that Congress outlaw rail walkouts, and require all railroad disputes to be settled through arbitration. Legislation to this effect has been sponsored by Senator Forrest C. Donnell (R, Mo.). Hearings on his bill are now being conducted by a Senate Labor Committee.

Testifying before the subcommittee yesterday, Harry A. De Butts, Southern Railway vice president of operations, said the walkout would bring "almost instantaneous paralysis of life" on the four struck railroads.

The Southern official whose 8000-mile line was hit by the strike—declared that the "firemen never had it so good" on steam locomotives as on the modern diesels. He said the roads see no "escape" from the conclusion that rail strikes and lockouts must be made illegal.

Guy Gabrielson, Republican national chairman, meanwhile urged that President Truman quit his Western "nonpolitical" speaking tour, come back to Washington and try to settle the rail strike.

There were confusing reports streaming into Washington as to the effectiveness of the strike. In some areas, members of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen were said to be respecting the firemen's picket lines. On the other hand, the Southern reported that some of its "regular firemen" had reported to work yesterday despite the strike call.

1000 Here May Be Idle

Southern announced that it would lay off 38,000 employes—including 1000 here—and shut down altogether if it found it could not get replacements for the striking locomotive firemen.

Meanwhile, Southern managed to get a number of its trains running through its Dixieland network, with some of the absent firemen's posts taken up by supervisory and managerial employes. One jubilant Southern official announced in Atlanta that the line, despite the strike, would be operating near full capacity within 48 hours.

In Washington headquarters of Southern, there was no such grand optimism, but the line did amend its embargo to announce it will accept all carload freight subject to delay, from all points on the Southern system. One passenger train and several freights ran out of Washington yesterday.

The Pennsylvania announced that 250 of its 1000 daily passenger trains running west of Harrisburg were affected by the strike, but that normal operations were being conducted between New York, Philadelphia, Baltimore and Washington. As many as 50,000 Pennsylvania employes were faced with strike furloughs, including several hundred in the Washington area. Pennsy's service from here to points west was crippled by the walkout.

The Chesapeake and Ohio, not directly involved in the strike, was forced to cancel 22 trains, including six running into and out of Washington, when the line's firemen refused to operate C&O locomotives over tracks leased from Southern between Orange, Va., and the District. Hardest hit was the C&O's Pere Marquette Line operating through Michigan.

Solution Is Found

Later in the day, C&O announced that the difficulties with the firemen had been straightened out, and that regular operations would be resumed at 7:30 last night.

The New York Central canceled 125 passenger and 300 freight trains because of the strike on its line west of Buffalo. The central moved nine trains to the west yesterday. Fifty thousand other NYC employes stand to lose their jobs for the duration of the strike.

The Santa Fe removed four major trains between the Pacific Coast and Chicago, and planned to operate as many trains as possible with supervisory help manning the firemen's stations.

To Get Charter Tonight

The Washington chapter of the Public Relations Society of America will receive its charter tonight at 7 p. m. in the board room of the National Press Club. Presentation will be made by J. Handly Wright of St. Louis, national president of the group.

Merchants Pledge $230,000 to UJA

Pledges totalling $230,000 were made last night at a dinner of the mercantile division of the United Jewish Appeal at the Hotel Statler. They brought the total in the present District campaign to $1,530,000. The goal here is $2,500,000. Charles B. Dulcan, sr., vice president and general manager of The Hecht Co., chairman of the mercantile division, presided.

SESQUI—From Page 1

Sesqui Votes To Drop Fair

ning work already completed or planned.

Barron set the amount thus far spent on the fair at "considerably less than" $100,000. Other possible claims, he said, will be negligible.

The Sesqui books presently look something like this, according to Barron: Of the original three-million-dollar appropriation, about one million dollars has been expended or budgeted for other than Freedom Fair celebration projects. That added to the $1,250,000 recommended for impounding, leaves $750,000 available for future expansion of other Sesqui events or also for safekeeping in a reserve fund.

Yesterday's action was unanimous with exception of Barron who refrained from voting.

Staff Cuts Hinted

Drastic cuts in the 31-man Sesquicentennial staff also were hinted at by both Barron and Paul Massmann, the Sesqui's general manager.

Massman was brought here at a $25,000 salary principally to direct the Freedom Fair. There is some doubt whether he now will want to continue much longer as the Sesqui's administrative head. The number two man is Edward Boykin, former director and now a technical assistant drawing about $15,000.

Barron said no concrete offers have been made to operate the fair lock-stock-and-barrel but made clear that would have been "absolutely impossible" without a workable and official management setup "which we have been unable to get."

"Labor and industry would have financed the fair beautifully if we could have offered them a good site, space and the administrative machinery," said Barron. "As it is they've never been officially invited to participate."

In other Sesqui announcements, Paul Green's symphonic drama was officially named "Faith of Our Fathers," a story revolving around the life and times of George Washington. It will open the new amphitheater July 4.

Television Tower Permit Is Granted

The Arlington County Board has decided after all, to let the American Telegraph & Telephone Co. build a 227-foot television tower at 5300 Lee hwy., Arlington.

At a special zoning meeting Tuesday night, the board defeated, 3 to 2, a motion to revoke a use permit, granted for the tower construction last December.

Nude Redhead Slain; Found Off Roadway

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 10 (AP).—A pretty young red-haired woman was strangled with a rope today. Her nude body was dumped over a 40-foot embankment beside a little-traveled road leading to the Potomac River bridge into Handcock, Md.

State police said the murderer may have thrown her from a moving car.

Benjamin Mills of Hancock was hunting mushrooms on the West Virginia side of the river when he noticed the glint of the victim's fiery red hair.

Deep indentations of a rope had cut into the neck. It had been tied so tightly that police at first believed the marks made by the knot were stab wounds.

The outstretched body was at the bottom of a 40-foot embankment off old U. S. Route 522, little used since a new road was opened several years ago.

State police said the woman appeared to have been in her early 20s.

An autopsy was to be performed tonight.

Service Continues

4000 Strike At Largest N. J. Utility

Newark, N. J., May 10 (AP).—Some 4000 employes of the Public Service Electric and Gas Co. went out on strike today as negotiations for a new contract ended in a stalemate.

The employes are maintenance and installation men represented by the International Brotherhood of Electric Workers (AFL). There was no immediate interruption of service.

The company is the State's biggest utility firm.

Both public service and the union sent telegrams to Gov. Alfred E. Driscoll informing him of the negotiations stalemate. Under the State's utility antistrike law, the Governor is authorized to seize the company's properties and order strikers back to work.

Pickets were posted at Public Service plants this morning.

The State already has seized the properties of the New Jersey Bell Telephone Co. because of a strike threat resulting from a wage dispute between the management and its 10,000 CIO operators.

The dispute between Public Service and its AFL electrical men centered over wages. The union had asked a 5 percent wage boost and the company had offered 2 percent. Present wage scales were not disclosed.

Greyhound Strike In Southeast Ends

Lexington, Ky., May 10 (AP).—A six-day strike of Southeastern Greyhound bus drivers ended today and service was expected to be back to normal by midnight.

Guy A. Huguelet, company president, said union officials ordered the men back to work following a company-union conference with a Government conciliation representative here last night.

Five Senators Named to Get Facts on Crime

By Chalmers M. Roberts
Post Reporter

Vice President Barkley yesterday named the five Senators who will conduct the Senate's $150,000 investigation into interstate crime and its effect on local politics in the United States.

The list contained no surprises. It included Democratic Senators Kefauver (Tenn.), O'Conor (Md.) and Hunt (Wyo.) and Republicans Tobey (N. H.) and Wiley (Wisc.). Kefauver, author of the original crime probe proposal introduced January 5, is expected to be named chairman at an organizational meeting this afternoon.

Two of the five immediately issued formal statements, while Kefauver told reporters he was sure the group would do "a thorough and fearless job."

Tobey, who along with Hunt served on the Commerce subcommittee which recently questioned Gamblers Frank Erickson and Frank Costello, urged their recall before the new group. He said he wanted to have Costello, reputed lord of the underworld, "go into discrepancies between his testimony before our committee and testimony he gave to a New York grand jury."

Erickson, Tobey said, likewise should explain "certain contradic- the Commerce group.

"If perjury is the only crime on which such characters can be nailed," said Tobey, "let us start with that."

But it appeared last night rather unlikely that the committee would begin that way. First, it must select a chief counsel and a staff of perhaps a dozen investigators and set them loose sifting the mountain of material already accumulated on Kefauver's desk.

Tobey himself said the relationship between gambling and crime and similar tie-ups "can, and I am sure, will be more carefully examined by thorough stag preparation and preliminary executive hearings. It is interesting to note, however, that the recent New York raids on the notorious Frank Erickson show clearly the value of the type of evidence which a Senate committee is able to develop."

O'Conor, a former State's attorney in Baltimore and Maryland Attorney General, called for keeping the probe on a judicial level and for protecting "the proper rights of innocent persons." He added that it will be most important to keep in mind "the line of demarcation" between Federal and local-State levels of law enforcement.

As to a committee counsel, Kefauver said he had some people in mind but he named no names.

Meanwhile, the Justice Department said it would take a few more days for the 93 United States Attorneys to return the information asked of them on the Nation's top 150 underworld figures.

Trapped Well-Digger Dies As Rescuers Finish 26-Hr. Job

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

HEART-BREAKING VIGIL—Mrs. Maria Atteo, wife of the trapped well-digger, Dominick Atteo, sobs as she looks down well shaft in which her husband died minutes before rescue workers reached the entombed man. Kneeling at left is the trapped man's son, Joseph. Dr. Harold Berson is pictured at right

New York, May 10 (AP).—Well-digger Dominick Atteo died in agony today just five minutes before rescuers freed him at the bottom of a 20-foot shaft. He had been trapped there for 26 hours.

Half-blinded, the 49-year-old father of six children had fought off pain and exhaustion until the last by what doctors described as a superhuman effort of will and courage.

Workmen tunneling under a Brooklyn garage reached Atteo's side at 2:10 p. m. (EDT) and an hour later, despite a minor cave-in, reported the writhing, moaning prisoner was "99 percent clear."

But the last shovelsful of earth and stone were dug away too late.

Gray-faced with fatigue, Dr. Harold Berson emerged from the garage floor excavation and shook his head.

"He died just five minutes before I got to him," said the doctor, who had been lowered repeatedly to attend the trapped contractor. "I thought he was going to make it. His courage and endurance were beyond belief."

The body was brought to the surface at 2:40 p. m.

Atteo's 32-year-old second wife, Marie, who wept and prayed at the well throughout the long vigil, went into hysterics at the end, screaming and striking out at spectators.

His son John, 26, who lowered the cigarette that touched off an explosion badly burning the entombed man last night, bitterly accused the rescue crews of waiting too long before starting the trench that ultimately reached Atteo.

"If they'd started digging right away he'd have been out long ago. There wouldn't have been an explosion and he'd be alive now," the dead man's son cried out.

Police Inspector Walter Klotzback said "nothing more could have been done than was done."

Atteo was buried to the armpits and one leg was pinioned by a large boulder when the walls collapsed shortly after noon yesterday

Brooklyn Lieutenant Indicted For Perjury in Gaming Drive

New York, May 10 (U.P.).—New York's gambling crackdown shifted today to Brooklyn, where a police lieutenant was indicted by a grand jury on perjury charges.

The indictment against Police Lieut. James F. Reilly charged that he gave false information in connection with the grand jury's investigation of alleged "protection" payments to police by gamblers.

Reilly, who had been questioned specifically about two loans made to him by a poolroom operator, pleaded innocent when he was arraigned in Kings County Court. He was ordered held in $2500 bond. Earlier, he had been suspended by the police department.

[The Associated Press said Reilly admitted he borrowed $6000 from Gustave Wagner, a poolroom operator. Reilly said he borrowed the money to buy two houses and that he repaid the loans.

[The indictment charged that the poolroom operator presented the money to Reilly for reasons unexplained. It also charged that Reilly falsely told the jurors that the money was loaned to him.

[Another count in the indictment charged the officer with attempted subornation of perjury.

[If convicted, Reilly faces a possible maximum penalty of $10,000 fine and 10½ years in prison.—Editor's Note.]

In a separate investigation, the District Attorney's office pressed its search into the affairs of gambler Frank Erickson. It claimed to have broken the silence of his financial "stooge".

Harry Richards, 62, Erickson's financial dummy jailed as a material witness in the city's crackdown on bigtime bookmaking, was reported "cooperating" with District Attorney Frank S. Hogan's office.

Two assistant D. A.'s questioned Richards yesterday. He also was quizzed secretly Monday, it was disclosed.

The prosecutor's office did not elaborate on the questionings but indicated it might be ready for grand jury presentation by the first of next week.

Sol Gelb, Erickson's attorney, gave no indication when the bigtime gambler himself might appear. He said he assumed the prosecutor's office was "working toward an indictment."

Morris Cooper Quits Big Betting Business

St. Louis, May 10 (AP).—Morris L. (Morrie) Cooper announced today he is retiring from his horse race and baseball betting business, said to be one of the largest in the country.

Cooper was nationally known as a betting commissioner who fixed odds and handled "layoff," or insurance bets, for other bookies.

He denied he was influenced by recent hearings by a Senate subcommittee investigating gambling. A local competitor, James J. Carroll, testified before the subcommittee.

MEATS

There're many reasons why GIANT meats are becoming so very popular! First of all, only the "top" grades are bought for GIANT stores. U. S. Department of Agriculture listings show there's often as much as 4c a pound difference between the low and the top grades in each classification. Therefore there must be a difference! Our buyers are instructed to pay whatever price is necessary to get the "top" of the best grades, whether "good" or "choice." You will be better satisfied with GIANT meats.

EGGS

GIANT knows an egg's most important points are its freshness and quality. That's why GIANT handles only eggs from nearby farms—in their freshest condition. Egg quality depends on the breeding, care, and proper scientific feeding of the chickens. GIANT gets its eggs from farmers whose sole attention and scientific knowledge is devoted to outstanding egg production. You'll be better satisfied with GIANT eggs.

NOTE—the world's most modern equipment, expert candlers, government grading alone cannot guarantee you FRESH eggs of PRIZE quality! Your assurance of these points lies in buying eggs from dealers (such as GIANT) who have the experience, knowledge and contacts to buy eggs from nearby farmers engaged exclusively in raising hens that produce QUALITY EGGS, and who have the facilities to transport them in the shortest period of time from their sources of supply to their stores.

Irish Envoy Sees Bloodless Island Union

John J. Hearne, first Irish Ambassador to the United States, predicted yesterday that Ireland some day will be united. And this, he said, will be achieved without civil war.

Ambassador Hearne discussed Ireland's long struggle for freedom at a luncheon in the National Press Club. Taking up the problem of partition, he said:

"The whole soil of Ireland is the property and domain of the whole Irish people. If any man tells you today that the question of ownership of the national territory of Ireland, or of jurisdiction over this or that part of it, can only be settled by dividing it into two, that man's argument will, I know, have the same effect upon the mind . . . of every American citizen as the plea of the false woman who would solve the question of the ownership of a little child by putting it to the sword, had upon the judgement of King Solomon. . . .

Majority Should Rule

"The main question is whether the majority of the Irish people, living in Ireland, have the right to rule the whole of our famous island. To put it another way, the question is whether any power has the right to forcibly occupy any part of the territory of another country against the declared wishes of that country.

"For the partition of Ireland was not effected by Irishmen. The problem of Irish unity is not primarily an Irish problem; it is an Anglo-Irish problem."

Ambassador Hearne said that Ireland made numerous efforts to obtain British friendship and to win British cooperation on plans for a united Ireland, offering such guarantees as protection of the religious minority and proportional representation.

"Don't think for a moment," he said, "that because our efforts failed, they were not justified. We want unity, but we also want peace. And we are going to achieve unity without civil war.

People Are United

"Never were our people more united than they are today on that challenging and unchangeable policy. It is an issue good enough and great enough to command the duty and discipline of all Irishmen at home and the support of all men of good will throughout the world. The same principles of democratic liberty and national integrity which make America great will make Ireland one. And, one day, an Irish Ambassador will speak to this great society of yours on behalf of a united Ireland."

The Irish envoy recalled that Benjamin Franklin stopped off in Dublin on his way to Paris, where he was to serve as America's first Ambassador to France. He said he felt that he was belatedly returning Franklin's visit in coming to Washington as Ireland's first Ambassador.

Among those who attended the Press Club luncheon were Attorney General J. Howard McGrath, Secretary of the Navy Francis P. Matthews, White House Secretary William D. Hassett, and Representative Rooney (D., N. Y.) and Fogarty (D., R. I.).

Also present were John A. Reilly, president of the Friendly Sons of St. Patrick; Martin A. Cook, president of the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and Sean Sheahan of the Doglas Hyde Gaelic Society.

Pigeons, Robin in News but Are Unconcerned . . .

The Washington Post

PRO AND CON—Citizens in the vicinity of Dupont Circle were startled with the news that Vice President Barkley would release 100 pigeons at the underpass ceremonies Tuesday. Consensus of opinion indicated that at present the S.R.O. sign was out for pigeons at the Circle. Committee spokesmen claimed that the ceremony pigeons were homing birds and that there wasn't anything to worry about; meanwhile the Dupont birds had no comment

Pigeons Worry Dupont Circle, Robin Thrills SW. Family

By Bill Brinkley
Post Reporter

It was a great day for the birds yesterday in Washington.

Out of Dupont Circle plans to have Vice President Barkley release 100 pigeons at underpass ceremonies Tuesday brought vehement protests from Circle citizens, who claimed the pigeons already there are about to run them out of the place.

In Southwest Washington, a pop-eyed 13-year-old boy awoke to the greatest excitement of his life right on the window ledge next to his bed: A mother Robin cooing contentedly on a nest of four eggs.

And at the Zoo a brilliant band of 35 parrots, parakeets and macaws emerged joyfully from 90 days of quarantine to join Animalland's mighty chorus of singing feathered friends.

Consternation Afoot

There was no talk of "feathered friends" on Dupont Circle, where consternation undiluted seized the citizenry on the news of the One Hundred.

Theme behind this colorful touch to the underpass festivities was that the pigeons would be returning to the Circle after all these years, like the swallows to Capistrano.

"Heavens, don't tell me any more!" was the reception of Col. E. Goring Bliss, president of the Dupont Circle Citizens Association, to this part of the program.

Colonel Bliss reported he had received a number of calls in a like vein.

Incredible, Says Mrs. Church

In the words of Mrs. Melville D. Church, a Dupont Circlean all her 60 years, who could not believe anyone would deliberately increase the Circle's pigeon colony:

"The pigeon population is now far over its quota. There is standing room only on every roof and window in the area. One hundred more would really be too much to bear."

But relief! A spokesman for the ceremonies committee announced hurriedly that the pigeons on being released will circle the Circle once then return to their own private bungalows far away!

They are homing pigeons.

The once-in-a-lifetime boy of the fabulous Robin experience was Billy David. Billy was so fascinated he could hardly speak.

UNRUFFLED—Mrs. Robin is at home on her maternity nest on a windowsill at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William J. David of Galveston st. sw. Their son Billy made the discovery. Quadruplets are expected

It really began two weeks ago, when Mama Robin and another Robin Billy discreetly presumes was Papa Robin began building the maternity nest on the ledge of his bedroom window.

It was a miracle how with little bits of straw and mud they could build so fast—and on such a small space, only 5 inches.

Then Monday a week ago Mama Robin settled in. That day she promptly delivered an egg, and proudly repeated the trick the next three days to make quadruplets.

Light Carrier Bataan To Return to Service

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP).—The light aircraft carrier USS Bataan will be recommissioned at the United States naval shipyard here on May 13, the Navy reported today.

The Bataan, first ship to commemorate a battle of World War II, participated in the attacks on Truk, Ponape, the Carolines, the Marianas, Iwo Jima, Okinawa and Japan.

Capt. Edgar T. Neale, Baltimore, will take command of the ship and Comdr. Reginald Rutherford, Falls Church, Va., will be executive officer.

Bridge "Bugs"

Washington's new 14th Street Bridge may be a marvel of engineering achievement, but a lot of the motorists who became snarled in the Tuesday afternoon tie-up were of a different mind. It is a pity that the opening of the new northbound span had to be followed by an annoying jam on the exit from the old bridge, now used entirely by southbound traffic. The cause of the jam, which during rush hour backed cars up to C street and delayed them half an hour, was the fact that it was necessary for southbound traffic to squeeze from four lanes into two on the Virginia side of the bridge.

The old bridge, it is true, had been in use by two-way traffic up until noon Tuesday, and that would have made any widening of the old approach lanes difficult. Some patience is called for until the "bugs" in new road improvements are found and eliminated; for example, the Traffic and Highway Departments acted quickly to iron out much of the confusion after the Whitehurst Freeway was opened last fall. Nonetheless, it should be possible to anticipate such obvious difficulties as those which inevitably arise when four lanes of home-bent autos are compressed into two. Might it not be better in the future to delay the opening of such structures until the more evident bottlenecks can be removed?

Sabotage By Slander

Suppose that some foreign power wanted to cripple the American atomic energy program. One way to do it, of course, would be to single out a few of the country's foremost nuclear physicists—there aren't so very many—and dispose of them by assassination. A knife-thrust in the dark, a bullet fired from ambush, a drop or two of poison—these could effectively take out of action the men who did most to create American primacy and supremacy in atomic weapons, such men as, say, Bacher, Rabi, Fermi, Bethe, Teller, Oppenheimer. These men carry around in their minds secrets—and the skill to discover new secrets—more valuable than any that could possibly be uncovered by espionage.

But murder is a messy, awkward business. The assassins are liable to be caught and executed; the plot might be discerned before it could be completed. Anyway, it's quite unnecessary. How much more simply the same results can be achieved by a few words craftily spoken before some legislative committee. Character assassination is at once easier and surer than physical assault; and it involves far less risk for the assassin. It leaves him free to commit the same deed over and over again, and may, indeed, win him the honors of a hero even in the country of his victims.

Inexcusable Strike

It would be hard to conceive of a strike with less merit, from the public standpoint, than that which has tied up four major railroads. The strike has been called by the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen to enforce demands for a second fireman on multiple-unit diesel locomotives. That demand has twice been turned down by presidential fact-finding boards on the very reasonable ground that there is little or no work for a second fireman to do. The crippling effects of the strike cannot yet be fully judged, but certainly they will be great. The New York Central, Pennsylvania, Santa Fe and Southern are all trunkline railroads linking major cities; in many instances they afford the only direct route. A subsidiary effect of the walkout may be seen in the Chesapeake & Ohio order canceling passenger trains out of Washington because they must use Southern tracks.

From the standpoint of the firemen, the issue is twofold: prestige and job security. There is an intense rivalry between the firemen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, who also have asked for a second crewman on diesels but have not pressed their claim. Jobwise, most of the rail unions fear the inroads of dieselization — for diesels can haul heavier trains faster over longer distances, and there is a threat of potential displacement of some crewmen.

The fear of fewer jobs is behind much union featherbedding, but the means used to combat that fear are reminiscent of the Luddites, who broke the machines that displaced them. A major factor in declining rail traffic is the high cost of transportation. Diesels give promise of reducing costs and attracting new traffic—but economies can easily be nullified by featherbedding. Yet increased traffic is the only real guarantor of job security. Is it not time for rail unions and managements to get together and affirm their faith in an expanding economy, meanwhile making some provision for retraining and relocating temporarily displaced workers?

By striking only four lines, the union undoubtedly hopes to avoid the cry that a national emergency exists. But these lines are vital arteries to many parts of the country, and some sort of seizure may soon be necessary. Indeed, we think Congress ought to take another look at the Railway Labor Act, which is predicated on reasonable acceptance of the facts. Compulsory arbitration of rail disputes would have many undesirable ramifications, but it might be inescapable as a means of protecting the public interest—especially against a strike such as this one which seems to have resulted primarily from a union attempt to save face.

School Equality

The walls of prejudice are not easily breached; but once the breach has been made, they are likely to come tumbling down in a hurry. There is a sign that this is so in the reaction of Harry C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, to the Maryland Supreme Court ruling that the university must admit a Negro to its school of nursing. "The only course to be taken, so far as I can see," Dr. Byrd was quoted as saying, "is to make preparations for providing equal facilities." This will prove neither so difficult nor so onerous, if undertaken in good faith, as prejudiced views have made it seem. Once Maryland has had the experience of providing equal facilities for Americans of different races, it will find the policy as natural and as pleasant to pursue as providing equal facilities for Americans of different religions.

The Maryland Supreme Court ruled that the constitutional requirement of equal protection could not be satisfied by sending Esther McCready, an applicant qualified for admission to the State institution on all grounds save race, to the Nursing School of Meharry Medical College in Nashville, Tenn. Meharry College is one of those regional schools set up by an interstate compact for the purpose of keeping Negroes out of State universities reserved for whites. The regional school scheme was a dodge that could not even be called artful, and there is something extremely heartening in the candid recognition of this fact by the Maryland Supreme Court. We hope that the University of Maryland will forgo the even more artless dodges essayed by the Universities of Texas and Oklahoma, now under test before the Supreme Court of the United States.

Power For Symington

In Reorganization Plan 25, President Truman has again moved to give the National Security Resources Board some of the importance it should have had from the beginning. The first step was to appoint a full-time chairman for the mobilization-planning agency which had been leaderless for 15 months. This Mr. Truman did last month by nominating W. Stuart Symington, former Secretary of the Air Force. Reorganization Plan 25 is the next step. It would give Mr. Symington, as chairman, the responsibility now vested in the entire board for preparing plans and advising the President. It would also give Mr. Symington necessary help in the form of a vice chairman.

This newspaper has had some doubts in other situations about the wisdom of placing "strong" chairmen in a position to thwart other members of regulatory agencies. These considerations do not apply, however, to the NSRB. The Resources Board is composed of members of the Cabinet—all extremely busy men. Although they must be counted upon to implement much of the mobilization planning, they simply do not have the time to serve as collective advisers to the President on over-all mobilization policy. It is indispensable to good administration of the NSRB to have continuity of responsibility—and the chairman, who supervises the all-important staff work, is the logical person to exercise it.

This should not mean that other members of the board will be ignored. Their advice and, indeed, their consent on general policy are essential. But even more essential is an energizing force to get things moving—something Mr. Symington should be better able to supply under the reorganization. Some of the functions of the NSRB, such as economic warfare, are still too vague, but no one can doubt that the responsibility for keeping plans up to date for the mobilization of human and physical resources and for drafting standby legislation—not to mention supervision of civil defense—is enormous. As an ex officio Cabinet member whose job is potentially as important as several regular Cabinet posts, Mr. Symington needs all the help he can get.

Mr. Harris' Compromise

It is late in the day for Representative Harris to be introducing a suffrage bill for the District, modest though its provisions are. The measure he dropped into the hopper on Tuesday would give the District an elected school board, a nonvoting delegate in Congress, and a reorganized local government still under the control of appointed Commissioners. At the same time Mr. Harris introduced a resolution providing for representation of the District in Congress and in the national electoral system. The chance for any action on either measure at this session of Congress appears to be nil. The only constructive aspect of the move is that it places Mr. Harris on record as favoring the restoration of District suffrage in at least some form.

The chief question is why Mr. Harris came forward with his suffrage bills at this late date in the last session of the Eighty-first Congress. He says that he waited until now so as not to interfere with the petition to dislodge the home-rule bill from the District Committee. He assumes that the discharge petition is now dead. He cannot blame us, however, if we see back of Mr. Harris' measures an effort to divert attention from the discharge petition and thus prevent the House from voting on the Kefauver bill passed by the Senate. The fact that the petition is not dead was given sharp emphasis on Tuesday by the addition of four new signatures. No member of the House should be deceived by this offer to compromise now that 179 Representatives are demanding an opportunity to vote on the real home-rule bill.

If Mr. Harris had any genuine interest in sending a compromise measure to the floor, he would have had his subcommittee at work on it months ago. The only way in which he could now demonstrate a real interest in reforming our local government would be by inducing the District Committee to send the home-rule bill to the floor, with such amendments as it might choose to make. That would give the House a chance to pass judgment on the committee's bill and the Kefauver bill passed by the Senate. But there is not the slightest indication that any such "compromise" is contemplated. In other words, the Congressmen who are eager to be relieved of the burden of serving as city councilmen and to give the District an American form of government should hasten to sign the discharge petition.

Union In Western Europe

There's a logic about the French plan for supranational control of heavy industry in western Europe that will doubtless repel the opportunists and the doctrinaires and the drifters in foreign-policy making. Let us examine the logic. The French are weak, the Germans strong. It is unrealistic to expect a Franco-German combine without either the entry of the British as a balancer or a real merger of the tools of war which would erase nationality. An inner advantage is that amalgamation would allow the French to absorb two or three million Germans in their population without fear of internal upset. Britain's cool and cautious attitude toward unity in Europe requires concentration on the alternative of a non-British continental authority.

Approach the problem in another way. There can never be any unity in Europe without the prior establishment of a vested interest in it. This thought was one of the great contributions to political theory of Alexander Hamilton. In "assuming" the preexisting debts of the constituent States, he built up a vested interest in Federal union on the part of the moneyed class of the young America. Similarly the control of heavy industry by the affected countries in unity would create a vested interest in European unity. So the French policy represents a contribution to integration of the utmost significance.

Our satisfaction is influenced by the fact that since the war ended The Washington Post has advocated exactly this plan as the necessary first step in establishing the European system in accordance with modern realities. It was given priority over Mr. Hoffman's Payments Union in our last comment. Mr. Schuman is still nuclear in concept. As a starter he would restrict control to Germany, France, and the Saar. Clearly the Foreign Minister wants first of all to overcome the stumbling block over the Saar which has created a new controversy between France and Germany. Incorporation in a wider union would simply swallow the Saar problem. In time, however, the authority would doubtless take in Luxembourg, Belgium and Holland, for these three countries, now working toward unity themselves, have a vital stake in the Ruhr complex.

It has been our experience that two objections are usually advanced against such an economic union. One is fear of worker hostility, the other fear of cartelization. However, as to the workers, these have long been in advance of their governments. On March 15 a year ago, the union leaders of the metal workers of Germany, France, Luxembourg, Holland and Belgium met to try to promote the idea of a continental industrial entity. The upshot was the establishment of the Joint Committee of the Metal and Mine Workers Unions. Headquarters are at Luxembourg, where the meeting was held, and there could have been no better place for the achievement of consolidation, for Luxembourg was the former headquarters of the Ruhr cartel.

Cartel! Does the word apply to the proposed new authority? Mr. Schuman takes specific pains to apply just the opposite description. He says it would be an anti-cartel authority, dedicated to free expansion, and in an effort to meet objection by the anti-cartelists, the United Nations would be invited to have a representative sitting with the authority.

In sum: Mr. Schuman has the root of the matter in him. A new Europe, as he puts it, will never be born by decision, but by action—action based upon what Metternich called "a unifying idea." The only "unifying idea" in a context of postwar modern life which has made prosperity and peace indivisible is unity itself. The Schuman policy is based upon the concept of a new Europe which shall be co-prosperous and co-peaceful. Many have had this idea before Mr. Schuman, including Messrs. McCloy and John Foster Dulles. It may be well here to pay tribute to one of them, for Washington will soon be the poorer because of his departure. This is the Netherlands' Ambassador, Mr. E. N. van Kleffens, who, as far back as 1943, proposed something very similar to the Schuman idea. It has been left to Mr. Schuman to spark a plan, which, we are confident, had been thoroughly studied and prepared before it was offered for public and ministerial consideration.

Lansburgh Murder

This letter is prompted by the latest developments in the crime that occurred in our store on Good Friday when two of our watchmen were slain.

In the interest of fair play, we at Lansburgh's, through close observation and cooperation with the men who serve in the various branches of the Metropolitan Police Department, have been deeply impressed with the performance of all of these men.

From the time of their first arrival at the store, early in the morning when the crime was committed, they have worked like beavers and conducted a most intensive search for evidence that could lead to a solution.

They started from scratch, with nothing definite upon which to proceed. Hundreds of people were interviewed, and every possibility investigated, which created a confidence that in time the mystery would be solved. The break in the case was quickly recognized, and we believe that full credit should be given to Major Barrett and his fine organization.

The apparent solution of this case should serve as a salutary warning to those who defy law and order, and we confidently believe that our Police Department will curb the wave of crime that has recently disturbed the citizens of Washington.

Back To The Soil

Your reporter John Ball, recently revealed that for the fiscal year 1949 the Government suffered a deficit of $600 million for the price-support program. I cannot recall that Thomas Jefferson, the champion of the agrarian society, in his forebodings about the rise of commerce and industry ever visualized the astounding spectacle of a farm populace supported by the taxes of the central government.

The financial and industrial tycoons have long since appeared upon the American scene. The inevitable proletariat, propertyless and rootless, are an ever greater problem. Vast numbers of people spend their lives doing meaningless repetitive tasks. The simple agrarian society is gone.

In Jefferson's day nine tenths of the population earned its bread by farming, and the rest were mainly engaged in crafts and trades. Today, however over 80 percent of our populace live in towns and cities, and the self-employed man is the exception rather than the rule. It has been said that the most significant thing about the colonization of North America is that it changed the ratio of land to people. Thus ownership of land was open to the common man. Possibly the most ominous development in the twentieth century for the future of democracy in the United States is the rise of a rural proletariat, the increase in farm tenancy, and the gradual disappearance of a widely distributed ownership of productive land.

There is, I think, one obvious, though difficult, step that many an able-bodied American can take toward the reclamation of independence—the abolition of subsidized agriculture, and the restoration of a more balanced culture. He can go to the land as our forefathers did. He can adopt it as a principle that every vegetable raised in the family garden, every slab of bacon hung up from the family pig, and every quart of milk taken from the family cow is one more nail in the coffin of industrialized farming and one more step in a retreat from decadence.

This is a measure that involves dirty hands, long hours, and little in the way of cash profits. It seems to involve a lower standard of living. But many have come to see that creative manual work is a higher and more human activity than much that nowadays passes for productive work in offices and factories.

Arming China

An Associated Press dispatch from Formosa quotes Chinese Nationalists as saying that "new jet fighters of Russia's Far East air force 'have definitely joined the Communist air force' in flying civil war missions."

And what country made and furnished the Nationalists with the planes they have been using against the Communists for years, are still using, and which have been responsible for the death of thousands of Chinese, including women and children? Nor does this take into account the vast amount of military materiel and the advisory personnel which we also have provided for the Nationalists.

Incidentally (Senator McCarthy and the Un-American Committee please note!), I am neither a Communist nor a "fellow traveler." In fact, I have been a member of the Republican Party since I was old enough to vote.

Arnold Bus Fares

I would like to second Mr. H. M. Harris' motion in his letter of May 8 that the Arnold Bus Lines provide a zone chart showing the different fare zones. I went from Falls Church to Cherrydale a few days ago and the fare was 10 cents, but the return trip to Falls Church was 15. The fare from Falls Church to Washington is one token and 10 cents, but returning after paying a token to ride to Clarendon, if you get off, it is 15 cents to go on to Falls Church. Maybe the company has a policy of charging less when you are leaving home than when you are returning—or what is it?

Soldiers' Home

Thank goodness someone has enough concern for the future of Washington to protest the plan to use part of the Soldiers' Home grounds for public buildings. The four members of the Audubon Society's Committee on the Preservation of the Natural Features of Washington stated the case so well in the letter you published April 28 that I can do little more than voice my agreement.

We are fortunate to be living in a relatively well-planned city. Most cities of course, just grew. Today these unplanned cities are paying, too late, for city plans. The planners must think many years into the future. They must be ready, and wait. Their maps show large clear spaces—strips of green several blocks wide right through what is now brick and concrete. As the present buildings become obsolete, the ground will be cleared. The planners divide the city into neighborhoods, each one separated from the others by these strips of open land. Thus they create—on paper at least—a city for kids to live in, a city without congestion.

Washington was planned. We have our strips of green. Are they "waste land" to be "put to use" by covering them with brick and concrete? Must we lose these things before we realize what we have?

Mother's Day Realism

As a mother, I would like to add my wee to the blather about Mother's Day . . . While well aware of the stresses and strains connected with the vocation of motherhood, I doubt that they're greater than those one surmounts on any responsible job. And to compensate for the "overtime" angle, we mothers rarely get fired! In view of the above, and the incalculable rewards connected with the business, why all the sentimental tosh?

The statistics on mental health, the crowded hospitals, the newspaper headlines, make it glaringly clear that the institution of motherhood warrants a great deal of serious and realistic thought. And that May 15 might be a good day for stock-taking rather than bouquets and bon bons.

Anti-Communist Surgery

Anti-Communist surgery is all very fine, but the surgeons must study the problem with cool and careful deliberation. Like the surgeon studies the eradication of a cancerous growth.

The Western powers, rich and powerful as they may be, cannot afford to waste their substance by costly and ineffective surgery as they have done up to now. The United States has spent close to two billion dollars to fight the Communists in China, pouring this money out to Chiang Kai-shek in full midst of an overdeveloped political tumor. The final result has been the loss of two billion dollars and a strengthening of Communist arms.

The French have spent since 1945 over two billion dollars in Indo-China with but little effective result to strengthen the playboy Emperor Bao Dai, who was far happier in Monte Carlo playing his 10-million-franc monthly allowance of the French government at the roulette tables.

There are many other examples of ill spent money as the credits which were allotted to the Philippines. But let us just take the waste in funds and Western energies and resourcefulness represented by the American folly in China and the French folly in Indo-China. Enough to start a small Marshall Plan in the areas of Southeast Asia that are not yet suffering from a tumor that does not lend itself any more to the anti-Communist surgery. Enough to start a small Marshall Plan in Latin America. Areas in which, if we delay constructive measures too long, we will also be faced on a long-range basis by a political tumor that will escape the Secretary of State's scalpel.

It has been demonstrated since 1945 that you cannot fight communism by merely pouring dollars and arms — with the exception of Greece where we poured also men and advisers and risked war. The anti-Communist surgeon must view the problem like a firefighter who does not drive his truck in full midst of a blazing forest, but will try on the contrary to limit the spread of this fire by fighting it on the periphery.

It is up to the student of political science to determine where the periphery stands. May Secretary Acheson do so in the cold war talks with Schuman, Bevin and the other Atlantic Pact Foreign Ministers.

Looking Them Over by Video

Candidates' Testing

REVIVAL OF the baby-kissing technique has come at a time when modern science is ready to step in to further personal campaigning. As President Truman engages in another whistle-stop trip to show he is still "plain as an old shoe," and Republican women leaders taboo orchids and take campaign lessons in smiling and handshaking, television begins to bring the gestures and grimaces of public men into thousands of living rooms eventually. One example of this is televising of a Truman Cabinet meeting May 14 in Chicago.

Will this mean that only sleek, movie-star types who televise well will get the votes? No indeed, says a political observer back from a trip inland where he especially observed television oratory and debate. The big thing it means, in his opinion, is that the phony, the stuffed shirt, the big noise, the ranting demagogue—all these will find it hard to sell themselves to television spectators.

This observer insists that television has an uncanny power to show up a person for what he or she intrinsically is, and does this to a greater degree than does contact in the flesh. Deprived of the fanfare and mass enthusiasm of a political rally, a candidate comes on a television screen almost wholly on his own. Even Hitler would have been handicapped in such a situation.

Possibly the television speaker can win by his oratory or his convincing conversation. But often those watching and listening feel, like Emerson "What you are stands over you . . . and thunders so that I cannot hear what you say . . ."

AMONG THE political pleaders reported at a disadvantage on the screen are the mugger and the cold fish. The former's scowls, grins, apoplectic indignation often become merely amusing to onlookers. During the 1948 national conventions one orator of the old school who had worked himself up to a fine frenzy over the "rascals" he was assailing afforded great entertainment—of a type not planned—to many television fans.

In American politics one of the chief tests of a candidate has long been his feeling for and understanding of people. The recent movement to "humanize" the Republican Party is recognition that this still holds. The American voter usually is quick to spot the basic lack of warmth in candidates who, in the words of Herbert Agar, in a recent article in Harper's Magazine, "do not look and live as if they enjoyed democracy."

This feeling for the "human" leader runs deep. It shows up in the throngs that find solace at the shrine of Abraham Lincoln in Washington, and in the amazing and growing hold Lincoln has on the affections of the public. It shows up also in the public's enthusiasm for General Eisenhower. It showed up in the response President Truman got in his first whistle-stop campaign for the Presidency.

IT IS something more than an emotional search for a hero. While it may on occasions lead to a charlatan's temporary triumph, yet generally the people can be trusted in smelling out frauds if they have enough personal contact with them. Most of them have an instinctive sense of whether the man they are appraising meets the supreme test—does he have sincere faith in them?

When they have been fooled it has been partly due to the Hitler technique—big meetings, bands, flag waving, mass excitement and the great man mouthing his demagoguery in the distance. How well a rabble rouser will get away with his antics on a screen in a living room will depend partly on how prejudiced or easily duped his audience is. But at least he will be deprived of his props. And voters with any sensitivity of mind will be better able to take his measure as a man.

Television, if its boom continues, should by 1952 be a strong influence in the campaign. Eventually perhaps every candidate for office will be able by means of video to establish personal contact with voters. While video doesn't take the place of the old campaign handshake, it may give many a voter a better chance for judgment of candidates than he had in the past.

"I came home," said the political observer previously mentioned, "almost ready to forgive television its worst programs. For I felt it was beginning something very important, a closer and more realistic contact between people and their leaders."

Employes' Redress

I have devised a way to catch Senator McCarthy.

Since his libelous action against any individual has been protected by congressional immunity, I suggest he be subjected to libel suit for his Wheeling, W. Va., speech.

Let any State Department employe, file clerk or officer of executive capacity bring suit against the Senator on the basis that he has maliciously caused this person loss of prestige, loss of acceptance by his fellow citizens, loss of professional stature and undue humiliation. This is the result of the Senator's defamation of the plaintiff's life work, his chosen field of endeavor, his very subsistence.

Today and Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

A Most Important Event

THE FRENCH proposal to Germany, announced Tuesday evening by Mr. Schuman, has taken the world by surprise. But it is a very pleasant surprise. The French government has proposed to the German nation much more than concessions on this and that. The French have proposed that they take the first but also by all odds the most important step towards a final liquidation of the Franco-German conflict in Europe.

Lippmann

THE ESSENCE of the proposal is that the big industries of western Europe, fundamentally coal and steel, which are in Germany, in France, in the Saar, in Luxembourg and Belgium, shall all be brought under the same—a common—system of industrial law and regulation. The operating conditions, the trading rights and arrangements, the labor standards are to be made approximately equal despite the fact that the industrial region is under four—or if one counts the Saar, five—different political governments.

The French government has thus made a fundamental change in its attitude towards Germany. In place of dismemberment and prolonged inequality M. Bidault and M. Schuman are offering Germany full equality and a full Franco-German partnership in European affairs. This is the boldest, the wisest, the most far-reaching and constructive act of statesmanship since the end of the war. Chancellor Adenauer was quick to see the immense significance of the French proposal. If that proposal can be consummated, then in the Franco-German partnership there will come into existence the nucleus of a European power—of that "third force" which is so indispensable to the stabilization of Europe and to peace in the world.

NO PROJECT of this magnitude can be carried through without a struggle against vested interests of many kinds—in every country immediately concerned and in other countries as well. There ought to be no hesitation, it seems to me, on the part of the American Government in giving the proposal its full and active support in Bonn, in Brussels, in London and elsewhere. For this is a bus which we simply cannot afford to miss.

The terms of the partnership will have to be worked out by the French and the Germans. Our first role in the business is to do what we can to see to it that there is no interference from the outside. Then it is our right as an occupying power and our interest in the broadest sense to encourage the Germans and the French to believe that the risks will be less and the prizes will be greater if they are bold and magnanimous. For France and for Germany, after the terrible war and in the face of a war that would be so much more terrible, there is no safety now except in audacity.

The French proposal is bold and it is magnanimous. Only five years have passed since the end of the cruelest and most degrading of all the Franco-German wars. It is a bold and magnanimous act on the part of the French government, which is among the victors, to propose to its hereditary enemy, which is defeated, that they enter into a full and equal, and indeed an intimate, partnership in European affairs.

IN TAKING the decision to make the proposal the French government must have realized that this meant the revival of the political and economic influence of Germany in Europe. In any such equal industrial regime as the French are offering the Germans are bound by their technological and administrative gifts and discipline to play a leading part.

Moreover, the French cannot have had the illusion—which is entertained by many in Washington and in London—that this resurgent and powerful Germany can be "enmeshed" or "integrated" into being a useful, reliable secondary ally of Britain and of the United States. In a Franco-German partnership the Germans will acquire such independent power that they can have a foreign policy of their own.

What will that policy be? Some among us hope and believe that the Germans, having achieved full equality with the West, will therefore turn their backs on the East. I believe this to be a miscalculation. The Germans, living as they do in the middle and not on the western fringe of Europe, will have—as they have always had throughout their history—an eastern as well as a western policy. My own belief is that a Franco-German understanding would on the part of the Germans be followed by something like—at the least—a Bismarckian policy of "reinsurance" with the East. But within the framework of the Bidault-Schuman policy it would be possible, indeed necessary, for France to participate as an equal and fully informed partner in any German negotiations with the East.

ONE OF the prime facts of European life, which is not always fully appreciated in London and in Washington, is that Germany must have relations to the East. She can wage war to the East. She can make deals with the East. But what is impossible for Germany is to have no relations with the East.

We can get along without relations with eastern Europe and with Russia. Britain can get along. But not Germany. And any conception of European and German policy which assumes the contrary is sure to lead to disappointment and to failure.

Hastie's Judgeship

By Marquis Childs

Sit-Down Strike In Congress

REPUBLICANS are preparing to exploit what is the most glaring weakness in the role of a President on tour at this particular moment. Mr. Truman is barnstorming while Congress stays on the job.

Childs

What is even more pointed, he is out on a speechmaking trip while the Democratic majorities in Congress fumble the Fair Deal program. The Southern filibuster over FEPC in the Senate is hardly a favorable backdrop for an excursion in search of favor and votes.

The filibuster advertises the basic division in the Democratic Party at the very time that the President is sounding the theme of unity to the country. It also advertises the failure of leadership in a party in power for 17 years.

The Democrats have been in office so long that office-holding has become a taken-for-granted habit that implies little responsibility. The Republicans have been out of power for so long that they have become a querulous opposition without thought of responsibility for office-holding in an immediate future.

Besides the filibuster on the floor of the Senate, another kind of sit-down is going on that shows up the handicaps Mr. Truman suffers from in his own party. It is a prize example of the confusion of purpose between the White House and the Congress.

ON OCTOBER 15, 1949, President Truman sent to the Senate the nomination of William H. Hastie to be a judge of the Circuit Court of Appeals for the Third Circuit, which includes New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware. This was no routine appointment. Hastie is a Negro and it is the first time a Negro ever was appointed to a circuit judgeship.

Congress adjourned on October 19 without acting on the appointment. On January 5 of this year the President sent Hastie's name to the Senate again along with a number of other judicial appointments.

With only two or three exceptions, those other appointments have been acted upon. Until recently, no hearing had been held on the Hastie appointment. Officials of the Judiciary Committee say that a hearing was held more than a month ago but it was so carefully kept secret that Hastie himself did not know of it.

Meanwhile there is no indication of further action on the nomination. It is gathering dust in the files of the committee of which Senator Pat McCarran is the chairman.

All nominees for judgeships are investigated by the FBI before they are put in nomination. Moreover, Hastie had been a Federal District judge in the Virgin Islands and after that he was Governor of the islands. Some evidence exists that a second FBI investigation has been ordered, although the committee professes to know nothing about it.

THE MOTIVES for the sit-down on the Hastie nomination are not hard to discover. One reason is his membership in organizations subsequently judged subversive, including several for the advancement of the colored race. But his principal political activity in the past three years has been in Americans for Democratic Action, which has been strongly anti-Communist. He was at one time vice chairman of ADA.

While he was Governor of the Virgin Islands, the Saturday Evening Post wrote a highly favorable article about Hastie recounting his struggle up from poverty. The article reported that in the view of the Department of the Interior he was the ablest Governor the islands had ever had.

Hastie campaigned hard for Truman in 1948. His influence with Negro voters was considerable. And, in view of the appeal made by Henry Wallace's Progressive Party, it may well have been an important factor in swinging the great majority of the Negro vote into the Democratic camp.

There is ample room for criticizing our judicial system and the ever-growing habit of passing our judgeships solely as a reward for political services rendered. As Senator William Knowland of California pointed out, of the 289 Federal judges named from 1933 to 1950, there were 272 Democrats and 17 Republicans. In the years 1921-1933, 191 Republicans, 20 Democrats and 3 judges of unknown affiliation were named.

But quite apart from political loyalties, Hastie has demonstrated his fitness. It is unfair to discriminate against him for any reason whatsoever, and especially because he happens to have been born a Negro.

While President Truman is speaking fair words about the Fair Deal, key members of his own party are carrying out their own foreign policy (McCarran's private plank is a loan to Spain) and their own domestic policy. The net result is an embarrassing contradiction between words and deeds.

Lourdes Visit Proves Highlight Of Trip for Holy Year Pilgrims

Miss Kathryn E. Bowers, hostess for the 240 Washington Archdiocesan Holy Year pilgrims to Rome, is reporting to The Washington Post from time to time on the events of their trip. The delegation is headed by Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle. Her last report covered the reception by Pope Pius. It came by cable. Another of her reports, received yesterday by mail, covers the trip to Lourdes and the services there. It follows:

En route to Lourdes, May 2:

Dear Reader:

We reached the port of Le Havre this morning at dawn; had mass at 5:30 for all our pilgrims; breakfast at 6 a. m.; then disembarkation. We had been warned that we might not have much opportunity for food on the long train ride to Lourdes, so I arranged with our very obliging waiter on the ship for some chicken sandwiches to take with us. If you ever could have seen the size of the package he brought as we were finishing breakfast. It looked like about three loaves of bread wrapped up! It was four turkey sandwiches for Father Maurice King, Helen Fitzpatrick, Alma Happ and myself. French rolls about 8 inches long and 3 inches thick.

After a three-hour train ride, we arrived at the St. Lazare Station in Paris. It seemed like a dream that we were actually there. As we rode across the city, in special buses, to the Austerlitz Station, we had a quick glimpse of sidewalk cafes, hurrying taxis, the Louvre, the Rue de la Paix and other typical French scenes along the left bank.

Our compartment on the through train to Lourdes was just as pleasant and comfortable as had been the one from Le Havre. We were told we would arrive about midnight. A long ride, but what glorious anticipation at its end.

Makes 90 MPH

Our train, which made 90 miles an hour some of the time, arrived in the little village in the Pyrenees shortly after midnight.

The pilgrims were sent to several hotels, your correspondent going to a real French one, the Hotel Chapelle.

The elevator was a glassed-in affair, holding four passengers, and it rose in the air on a cable, without a shaft. Our room had beds with hand-hemstitched sheets and a sweet little balcony looking out on the mountains.

We wended our way to the Grotto for our first mass, at 8 a. m., said by Monsignor John S. Spence, followed by another one by His Excellency, Archbishop Patrick A. O'Boyle. Many black-garbed peasants were constantly presenting bunches of flowers and tall thin white candles for the Grotto altar.

It is rather difficult to decide how to give you a mental picture of the physical and spiritual aspects of this tiny village selected by Our Blessed Mother for many special graces, and developed by Catholics throughout the world in a tribute of thanksgiving for her solicitude.

153 Altars in Church

The principal church, which houses the Chapel of the Rosary, the Crypt, and the Basilica, one above the other in the order named, contains about 125 altars in constant use through the morning.

In front of the building is a large circular square, heolding about 15,000 people, and it faces something reminiscent of our Mall, which is called the Esplanade of the Rosary, beginning with a huge statue of the Madonna of the Crowning. The way is lined with marronniers or horse chestnut trees in full bloom. The clock in the tower of the Basilica chimes the hour with the traditional Ave Maria hymn.

Msgr. Henry F. Graebenstein and Father Peter Rakowski soon got themselves shiny beaver hats like those worn by the Spanish priests, with shallow crowns and wide brims.

Many of our pilgrims were glimpsed following the Chemin de la Croix, the Station of the Cross, up the steep mountainside. Among them Mary Nolz, Nell Gross, May O'Brien, Mildred Strobel, Lillian Worden, Erna Disselkamp, Mary Louise Brown and myself. The bronze figures in the Stations, are of heroic size, the Crucifix in the Twelfth Station being about 25 feet high.

Souvenir Purchases Made

Many souvenir purchases were made in the various open front shops facing the beautiful gardens of the Basilica. One of the shops carried the name of O'Toole & Walsh!

In the early afternoon, there began streaming into the town more than 4000 pilgrims from Spain, on their way to Rome for the canonization of Blessed Anthony Claret. Some of the women with their huge starched white lace headgear and big rolling collars of the same material were very spectacular, as were the multi-colored saris worn by the women in a group from Ceylon.

In the 4 o'clock procession for the blessing of the sick, we had the great privilege of having our own Archbishop carry the Blessed Sacrament. Several thousand pilgrims walked in formation up and down the Esplanade singing the many verses of the Ave Maria; also repeating, after the amplified voice of a priest, various aspirations, in vehement supplicatory tones.

The sick are lined up, in little covered carts, in the square in front of the Basilica, eagerly awaiting the individual blessing with the sacred host. Father Walter Schmitz was solicitous for our archbishop in the many ceremonies. The weather was perfect, with warm sunshine, cool breezes, and blue sky with tufts of fleecy white clouds.

Everyone Wrote Postcards

In various in-between moments, everybody was writing postcards. The regular postage was 15 francs, but some of our people found out that for 5 francs you could send a message of 5 words.

One of the girls sent a number of cards and on each one she wrote "Greetings from the blessed mother!" I hope her friends recognized her handwriting—even so, they might wonder what her present status is!

The impressive candlelight procession takes place at 8 o'clock each evening. Can you who are eager to read of our experiences get a mental picture of the huge square in front of the Basilica with the twinkling of 10,000 moving candles, in the hands of fervent pilgrims, defying the brilliance of the stars in the deep blue sky, to do honor to the Mother of God!

The procession moved in weaving fashion back and forth across the square, coming to a standstill as one huge mass of lights. There were various lighted insignia carried high among the marchers, showing the many parts of the world from which the pilgrims came. We were very proud that George W. Johnson of our group carried the U. S. A. lighted placard. He joined the otohers carrying markers to form a huge letter M on a platform in front of the crowd.

Marchers Sing Ave Maria

Throughout the demonstration which lasted about two hours, the Ave Maria was sung by the marchers, as well as the many spectators who lined the long high walks, and balconies around the square.

When a combined, simultaneous blessing by the seven bishops in attendance ended the ceremonies, the crowd quietly dispersed. I had as companion an old Washington friend, Jeanne Bordeaux, and who came to Lourdes to greet her Washington friends.

Strolling back to our hotel, we saw some of our group having refreshments at one of the famous sidewalk cafes. Among them were Mrs. Margaret Doran, Mrs. Ann Strieter, Mrs. Joseph Zirkle, Mr. and Mrs. William J. Crane, Jane and Margaret Herrity and Mrs. Charles McMahon.

At midnight there was mass at the main altar in the Basilica, said a Missa Cantat by all the pilgrims in loud, clear, ringing tones. At the 20 or more small altars surrounding the main one, priests said mass simultaneously with the center ceremony. It was a glorious experience to realize that God was descending in so many places at one and the same time!

Can you believe it when I tell you that we were all up and at the Grotto for mass at 6 a. m. on Thursday? Our Blessed Mother must have given us double energy so that we would not miss any of the graces of Lourdes. Thousands of pilgrims and even the sick were in attendance at this mass.

At 9 a. m. we boarded the train for Rome, and I can now appreciate Franz Werfel's being inspired to write the "Song of Bernadette" after his visit to this hallowed ground, chosen by our Lady to demonstrate her love for the world. Surely this love must spread and bring peace to humanity!

Until we reach the Eternal City!

Bookmobile Ready to Go Into Use

The Washington Public Library's first bookmobile will be put in operation next week.

Chief Librarian Harry N. Peterson said it will be used in the area east of the Anacostia River to supplement meager library facilities there. There are only two branch libraries—one very small—in the fast growing section east of the Anacostia, he said.

The 2000-book van will be stationed weekly at these locations, Peterson said: Monday, 12:30 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., Atlantic and S. Capitol sts.; 3 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., Nichols ave. and Raleigh st., se.

Tuesday, 12:30 p. m. to 2:30 p. m., Maryland ave. and Bennng rd., ne.; 3 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., Benning rd. east of Minnesota ave. ne.

Wednesday, 12:30 p m. to 2:30 p. m., 27th st. and Pennsylvania ave. se.; 3 p. m. to 5:30 p. m., Pennsylvania ave. and Alabama aves. se.

The schedule will be extended to a full week if requests for two additional staff members in the 1951 budget are approved, Peterson said.

The van will be at its scheduled stops for inspection and registration next week, Peterson said. Distribution of books will start May 22.

Grandma Hits Back

Hackensack, N. J., May 10 (AP).—Charles P. Bohem, 29, was jailed for two to three years today for striking his 85-year-old grandmother. Mrs. Sophie Watkins of Rutherford, testified he beat her because she wouldn't give him $5000.

Leaner Hogs Set New Pork Standard

Have you ever met a well-bred hog

Top-flight Government geneticists are trying to produce a near-perfect porker at the Beltsville Agricultural Research Center. They are applying hybridization to hogs, and coming up with answers that promise to change long-established standards for swine buying at the Nation's leading stockyards.

They also will result, the experimenters say, in better, tastier, more nutritious bacon, hams and pork. Because they will avoid a lot of waste, they may bring about less costly meat.

Already Wilson & Co., one of the biggest packers, is studying changing buying standards. At present packers grade hogs according to the meat they will "dress out." The new standard will be based on the amount of lean meat in each carcass.

There are five prime cuts of meat in a hog.

The Beltsville scientists have got their hogs up to an average of 50 percent prime cuts. They are now shooting at a higher proportion.

Theodore C. Byerly and John H. Zeller of the Bureau of Animal Industry revealed a hog-breeding program in cooperation with 28 Pennsylvania farmers, to visiting Department of Agriculture editors yesterday.

Cross-bred boars from Beltsville are being sent to the 28 farms, to be bred to pure blooded Chester White, Poland China, Berkshire or Hampshire sows. The carcasses will then be compared with the carcasses of pure blooded animals.

The Beltsville boards' will be of seven types. All are crosses of the Danish Landrace bacon hog. The crosses are Landrace-Chester White; Landrace-Large Black (a British breed); Landrace-Poland China; Landrace-Duroc; Landrace-Duroc-Hampshire, a three-way cross, and Landrace-Duroc-Hampshire-Yorkshire, a four-way cross.

The experimenters hope:

1. To increase by 10 percent the "lean meat" on each hog.

2. To develop a hog that will reach 225 pounds in five months—instead of the present average of seven months—with the same amount of feed.

3. To develop hybrid vigor in a hog that will result in more pigs per litter surviving.

Cooperation

31 Nations Take Part in Seed Session

One of the oldest examples of cooperation between nations in the interest of all is on display at the State Department this week.

It is the Ninth Congress of the International Seed Testing Association. ISTA was founded in Hamburg, Germany, in 1906. It has survived two world wars and a lot of politics. Thirty-one nations are represented at the present meeting—the first to be held in the United States—with a total of about 250 visitors.

The purpose of the organization is to establish standards of seeds, both as for quality and nomenclature. This year's meeting is the first in 13 years, due to the war and the disturbed conditions that followed it.

Several former members of the organization are missing from the present congress. Among them is Russia, which, although invited to this year's meeting, didn't accept.

The importance of an organization of this nature was stressed by W. A. Minor, assistant to Secretary of Agriculture Charles F. Brannan, who pointed out that the United States has imported 185,000 seed and plant collections since 1898.

Outstanding examples of importations that have become important additions to American production are soybeans, alfalfa and lespedeza. Distribution of improved types of seeds is one of the projects being considered for the Point Four program, Minor said.

Minor predicted the Point Four program will "require large quantities of high grade and tested agricultural seeds. No doubt these seeds will have to come from all parts of the seed-producing world and be tested by members of this association."

London, May 10 (U.P.).—One hundred sixty-eight Americans were presented to King George and Queen Elizabeth today, but their Majesties didn't speak to a one.

"I curtsied so quickly that the King and Queen didn't even speak to me," lamented Phylis Reed of New York. As it turned out, all the others had the same experience, guests at a royal garden party said.

"We didn't even get a chance to shake hands with them," said Mrs. Amon Carter, wife of the Fort Worth newspaper publisher.

Winter Wheat Crop Seen at 7-Year Low

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Official estimates of this year's wheat crop plummeted 73 million bushels during April to 690 million bushels, the lowest in seven years, the Government Crop Reporting Board announced yesterday.

This is only three-fourths as much as last year's 902 million bushels.

Yesterday's report was the most pessimistic in years. Decreases were forecast in nearly all crops reported this early, except milk and eggs. From January to April the Nation produced 38,325,000 pounds of milk compared with 37,006,000 last year. It produced 23,179,000 eggs; last year only 21,664,000.

The board added this ominous remark to its winter wheat report:

"Seeding of spring wheat has been seriously delayed in the important Minnesota - Dakota - Montana area, and farmers may find it impractical to seed their full intended acreage."

The board predicted, for the first time, that the total wheat harvest may fall below the Nation's requirements of a billion bushels. It said: "with only average yields in the spring wheat areas, production of all wheat may fall below a billion bushels for the first time in seven years." The first official estimate of spring wheat is scheduled for June 9.

The estimated requirement of a billion bushels is fixed informally by Agriculture Department wheat experts. Domestic consumption is estimated at 700 million bushels, divided roughly into 500 million for human consumption, 90 million for seed and 110 million for livestock and poultry feed. A small amount is used industrially—the steel industry uses about 200,000 bushels annually for brazing.

Export commitments call for at least 300 million bushels for the upcoming crop year—168 million under the International Wheat Agreement and 135 to 150 million, for the occupied areas.

Government wheat specialists estimate this year's carryover at the end of the crop year June 30, will total about 425 million bushels. This is about one-third more than normal.

The blame for the huge decrease is placed upon a record-breaking infestation of greenbugs and other insects in southwest wheat States, Oklahoma, Texas, New Mexico, Colorado and Kansas, plus widespread drought.

The report added the following pessimistic predictions:

"Adverse weather conditions during April further retarded farm work and vegetable growth, particularly in the Northern two thirds of the country.

"Hay prospects over most of the country are below average.

"Frosts in April, reaching nearly to the Gulf of Mexico, caused additional damage to fruit crops, particularly peaches.

"Early planted sugar beets and alfalfa have been damaged and retarded by freezing.

"Rye production of only 21 million bushels is in prospect. While more than in 1949 and 1946, such an outrun would be among the small crops of this century."

The report warned that the hay crop "may be inadequate in several areas for current livestock numbers . . . unless additional acreages of annual meadows are seeded.'"

Even the maple sugar and syrup crop is off. Sugar is predicted at 278,000 pounds. Last year it was 292000 pounds. The average is 413,000 pounds. A harvest of 1,946,000 gallons of syrup is predicted. Last year it was only 1,614,000, but the 10-year average, 1939-48 was 2,095,000.

Nearby Apples Unhurt; Peach Crop Reduced

A large crop of apples was predicted for States near Washington by the Government Crop Reporting Board yesterday. Virtually no damage from frost was reported, the board stated. Peaches, however, were badly damaged.

The board estimated that Maryland's 1949 tobacco crop, now being sold at auction, was worth $22,304,000 or 3 million dollars more than the 1948 crop. It totaled 41 million pounds.

The Virginia crop of 137 million pounds was valued at $60,168,000, or 8 million dollars less than the 1948 crop of 144 million pounds brought. The average price per pound dropped from 47.5 cents to 43.9.

The West Virginia tobacco crop brought its growers $2,139,000 compared with $1,946,000 in 1948. The price was the same, 48.8 cents a pound.

Last year's total tobacco crop was valued at 913 million dollars compared with 955 million in 1948.

Winter wheat in States nearby Washington showed a marked drop over last year, due entirely to reduced acreages. Maryland's forecast was for 6,232,000 bushels compared with 6,878,000 last year; Virginia 7,470,000 bushels against 8,732,000 in 1948 and West Virginia 1,365,000 bushels against 1,502,000.

Production of winter wheat per acre was larger than thoughout the country. The national average was fixed at 16 bushels an acre. The Maryland average was estimated at 19 bushels, Virginia at 18 and West Virginia at 19.5 bushels. They are the same as in 1948 except Virginia, which decreased half a bushel per acre.

Rye likewise was down in the three States. Maryland rye was estimated at 261,000 bushels compared with 266,000 last year; Virginia at 348,000 compared with 375,000 and West Virginia 25,000 compared with 26,000 a year ago.

Other reports on nearby crops were:

Apples: "In the Virginias, Maryland, Delaware and North Carolina, practically no winter or spring frost damage has been reported," the report stated.

"In most sections and for most varieties, the bloom is reported heavy with prospects best for the area as a whole since the large 1946 crop.

Peaches: "In Virginia, unusually warm January and early February weather caused premature development of peach buds, and subsequent low temperatures reduced the crop prospects sharply.

"Of the principal peach counties, damage appears greatest in Rockingham, Nelson, Roanoke and Amherst, but not quite so great in Albemarle and Frederick. Elbertas, the principal variety, suffered the greatest damage. Many orchards have fair crops of Georgia Belle and Golden Jubilee.

"West Virginia peaches were damaged by late freezes. In the eastern area a large percentage of the bloom was killed.

"Freeze damage appears light to date in Maryland and Delaware, but the extent of loss will be determined by the June drop.

Romance Obscures Mindszenty Story

By Richard L. Coe

"GUILTY OF TREASON," at Keith's, is the story of the Cardinal Mindszenty trial in Hungary. It appears to be factual reporting, with the celebrated Overseas Press Club the setting for the flashback story. Club members' writings supplied the author's background material.

The screen play is by Emmet Lavery, who wrote "Hitlers' Children" and "Behind the Rising Sun" for the screen. Watching the picture, one is fully alive to the parallels between the three attacks on the enemies of personal liberties. There is a sincere and honest abhorrence of the Soviet tyranny which impresses itself strongly on the aware observer.

That the picture does, somehow, lack an emotional pull cannot be denied, and this, I think, stems from a thoroughly American tone in the relationships of the central characters. One is, in short, always aware that this is what of necessity it is: a fictionalized account of one of the stirring stories of our day. That characteristic detracts from what "Guilty of Treason" has to say.

An American reporter tells the story of his days in Budapest just before and during the cardinal's trial. It appears that a young woman typifying Young Hungary, who had been with the French Resistance during the war, is in love with the leading Soviet officer in the city.

This fellow, although Author Lavery tries to make him typical of the young Soviets, seems more the American college hero, strapping, handsome and In Love. He has the typical quality of the young, misguided American male: redemption could be his through accepting the guidance of the wiser, beautiful young woman he loves. That he ultimately turns on her and causes her destruction is made to be more of a tragedy than his own chaotic life and beliefs.

Now this aspect of the story, a broad thread throughout the picture, detracts from what Cardinal Mindszenty is, what he has done, what predicament he is in and what it means to both his church and his country. Yes, there are speeches about those aspects, but by indulging in the romantic aspects of two less important figures, the story achieves the very unreality it seeks to avoid.

Daydreams and Reality

Such a point is of course, at the root of most of our American pictures and is why they approximate daydreams. The accent on Love purely for Love's sake is as escapist as a Walt Disney feature. That both the hero and heroine are totally without other friends or relationships and that they exist in a peculiar sort of vacuum may be exactly the coating around the medicine the producers have desired.

It may well make "Guilty of Treason" palatable to those who couldn't care less about Cardinal Mindszenty, but at the same time it detracts from his story and what his "trial" can mean to a free world. The Mindszenty affair is basic but by the misdirection of accent on what is thought to be a basic appeal for the movie masses, the very basicness of Midszenty is obscured.

And while the playing of Charles Bickford as the cardinal, Paul Kelly as the reporter, Bonita Granville as the girl and Richard Deer as her Soviet lover may be forthright in the tone of the script, they are not live people, but stereotypes. The black and white of their characters does not take us below the surface, although the outlines of the Mindszenty story are shown. The passion of life is lacking in "Guilty of Treason."

"GUILTY OF TREASON," Eagle Lyon release produced by Jack Wrather and Robert Golden. Screen play by Emmet Lavery, based on the book, "As We See Russia," by members of the Overseas Press Club of America. Photographed by Jack Russell. Directed by Feliz Feist. At Keith's.

ONLEY is definitely set with another one and, what's more, it's another Shaw comedy, "The Devil's Disciple," which Maurice Evans will be playing at the country dreamhouse the week of July 25 . . . The first Shaw will be the opening attraction, June 16, when Paulette Goddard stars in his "Caesar and Cleopatra."

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S "City Lights" is definitely set for a double-theater run next Tuesday, when the 20-year-old comedy opens at the Dupont and the Little. . . . The picture has been a Gotham sensation in its revival run, and Washington and Miami are now being used to see if Charlie's still got box-office pull. . . . If so, a big-time Chaplin revival will be under way and it should be, if only to bring back his "Modern Times."

ANOTHER CHAPLIN is in town, Charlie, jr. . . . The 24-year-old son of the great comedian is here for a brief visit after his New York stage bow in Bemelmens' "Now I Lay Me Down to Sleep." . . . Wisely, he's sworn off doing imitations of his dad in public; he's got an acting career of his own.

COLLEGE NIGHTS are Friday nights at Glen Echo's dance-minded Spanish ballroom . . . Sammy Ferro and his band have instituted a natural for the letdown night of the studying week . . . They play songs of the colleges and universities in this area and congratulate everybody on having the night off.

TONIGHT: First in the preliminary offerings of the One Act Play Tournament of divisions G to K in the Recreation Department series . . . The place: Banneker Junior High, 9th and Euclid sts., at 8:30.

BUSY VISITOR: Gloria Swanson arrived last night at the Carlton and the fabulous star has busy days ahead here. She'll show her latest picture, "Sunset Boulevard," to the exhibitors this afternoon and later be feted by them at a Variety Club party. She'll have a press conference for the high school papers the next day and Friday night will dedicate the U. S. Savings Bond booth at the opening of the Home Show in the National Guard Armory. Here's Gloria as she appears in that Paramount picture with the Hollywood background, a role for which she's already mentioned as an Oscar winner. It's easy to see why Gloria's still an eye catcher

Alexandrian Fined $300 For Numbers Game

James Scott, 55, of 1018 Wythe st., Alexandria, was fined $300 and costs yesterday in Alexandria Civil and Police Court for operating a numbers game.

Arrested April 22 at 600 N. Henry st., according to police, Scott was sentenced by Substitute Judge Harry F. Kennedy.

Russians Agree to Free Trawler for $75 Fine

London, May 19 (AP).—The Russians have agreed to release the British fishing trawler Eturia upon payment of a 300-ruble ($75) fine, a government spokesman disclosed in Commons today.

The Russians accused the crew of the 375-ton trawler of illegal fishing in the White Sea only one and a half miles from the Soviet coast.

AFL to Drive for Wage-Price Adjustments

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP).—AFL President William Green today asserted that only higher wages and lower prices can ward off widespread unemployment.

He pledged that in 1950 the Nation's largest labor union will conduct a drive to bring higher pay for workers and reduced cost of consumer products.

"That's sound economic policy," Green told a news conference after a closed-door session of the union's national executive council.

"The increased purchasing power which will result from a high level of wages will broaden the market for all types of goods and services as well as stimulate increased efficiency in business," Green said.

There were other major developments at meetings of the executive council and at a convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor:

Richard J. Gray, head of the powerful building and construction trades department of the union, said that "unless we can find in the existing parties men who are responsive to labor's needs, we shall be forced in our own defense to form another party."

The executive council indorsed sections of the Hoover report that call for the elimination of the general counsel of the National Labor Relations Board and reorganization of the Labor Department.

Green announced he will appoint a committee to make a scientific study of various pension plans and incorporate its findings in a report to be distributed among the 7,500,000 AFL members as "advice and information."

Green called it "dangerous" to place too great an emphasis on reports of unemployment. Before the situation becomes critical, Green said, there must be at least five million workers out of their jobs. Now, he said, there are only 3,500,000 unemployed, and he added their numbers are being reduced.

Green said increasing efficiency methods have sent corporate profits spiraling upwards, but have not been shown in higher wages.

$200 Pensions Are Reuther's 10-Year Goal

Atlantic City, N. J., May 10 (AP).—Walter Reuther said today that $100 a month pensions won by CIO automobile and steelworkers unions "just opened the door" on a program calling for $200 a month pensions in 10 years.

"We can build brick by brick so that in 10 years we can have the pensions people are entitled to and which industry can afford," the president of the CIO automobile workers told the steel workers convention here.

Reuther told reporters later he considered $200 a month an adequate pension and said that was his 10-year goal.

The $200 pensions would come from payments by companies and from social security, he said. The $100 a month pensions also include social security payments.

Earlier, Secretary of Labor Tobin said President Truman's tour is one of "preaching the doctrine of America's leadership in a world which has nowhere else to turn for protection against anti-democratic forces.

Tobin said the President was visiting a section of the United States "which is supposed to be isolationist" in an effort to spread this doctrine of America's leadership.

Tobin credited the Democratic Administration with preventing a postwar recession.

He urged the steel workers to vote next November for "men who believe in the program that has given America the strongest economy it has ever known."

U. S. Backing French Plan

purely national interest will be unavoidable for all of us."

A combination of French and German heavy industry, as represented by coal and steel, would outweigh Britain in the European scales. If Britain entered the pool, as suggested by Schuman, the government would have to take account of the pronounced effect on its planned economy schemes.

Aside from still nebulous phases of the Schuman idea, there remained a question of the extent of support the plan will get from the French people.

The plan escaped an adverse slap by only one vote in the foreign affairs committee of the French National Assembly today. When a rightest deputy moved that the government get prior aproval from Parliament for any pooling scheme, the committee voted him down, 18 to 17.

The plan is the most daring ventured by any French Foreign Minister toward Germany since the war. It probably would have toppled any French government if attempted a year or more ago.

Many French, as well as German Socialists, were expressing misgivings that the plan would cut across their ideas of public ownership.

At Bonn, however, the West German Chancellor Konrad Adenauer has called the plan a "generous step." Western Germany would have little to lose. France is in control of the Saar coal mines, whose output would be thrown into the pool for German use. Germany's coal and steel from the Ruhr already are under an international authority.

The scheme closely fits Acheson's urgent aim of knitting western Germany so closely to the West that there will be no question of her sliding into the Russian orbit.

The speed of Russian armament has impelled him to seek bold cooperation from America's partners in the Atlantic Pact.

Britain has given the impression that she is unmoved by the same sense of urgency. Consequently, few concrete decisions have been expected from the three-way meeting of Acheson, Bevin and Schuman.

The French suggestion, however, may change that and give an impetus to the conference that was lacking before.

Acheson and Bevin ended their talks tonight. No definite agreements were reached, it was reported, although officials described the talks as satisfactory.

A wide range of subjects reaching from Europe and the European payments problem of the Marshall Plan organization to the Middle East and Far East were discussed.

The morning meeting of Acheson and Bevin presumably was devoted to Germany, since advisers on German affairs were present. These included United States High Commissioner John J. McCloy.

The afternoon session turned to other world problems, including those in the Far East. Informed sources said they expected the three powers would make a joint declaration of aims in the Far East, and might work out a joint plan to aid anti-Communists in Burma, Indo-China, Malaya and other embattled countries.

Acheson went from Bevin's office shortly after noon to an audience with King George. Later he and Mrs. Acheson had luncheon with the King and Queen.

Acheson Denies Report He Offered to Resign

London, May 10 (AP).—Secretary of State Dean Acheson denied today reports that he offered his resignation to President Truman before coming to London for a current Big Three policy meeting.

His denial was in response to a question from a reporter.

President Truman asserted in a speech yesterday that the secretary has the support of the majority of Americans in the three-way policy talks here.

Sforza Lauds Proposal To Pool Industries

Rome, May 10 (AP). — Italian Foreign Minister Carlo Sforza today praised the "audacious initiative" of French Foreign Minister Robert Schuman for proposing a pool of Franco-German coal and steel output.

Virginia Scientists Open Yearly Session

By N. S. Haseltine
Post Reporter

Roanoke, Va., May 10—About 1000 Virginia scientists and 150 student scientists converged on this railroad city today for the twenty-eighth annual meeting of the Virginia Academy of Science.

The student scientists are taking part in the Virginia Science Talent Search and the Virginia Science Club contests, preliminary to scientific sessions of the VAS.

They began registering late this afternoon at nearby Roanoke College, 108-year-old liberal arts institution, at Salem, Va. First order of business after signing in was the setting up of exhibits and contest entries in the college's physics and chemistry department buildings.

Thursday, both junior and senior scientists will meet at the college in joint and separate sessions, with most emphasis on the youth activities. These include judging of the talent search and science exhibits contests, and business meetings of both the VAS and the Junior Academy.

The Junior Academy's annual business meeting will be held at the college at 2 p. m. Prior to this meeting, the high school students will be addressed by Professor Andrew Murphy of Roanoke College on "Chemistry as a Vocation."

Immediately after the business session, Dr. B. N. Cooper of Virginia Polytechnic Institute will speak on progress in improving the status of science instruction in high schools.

The Junior Academy dinner and presentation of awards to the winning contestants will be held at the college dining hall at 6:30 p. m. Principal speaker is Walter S. Flory, vice-director, Blandy experimental farm of the University of Virginia.

On Friday, the academy's annual scientific sessions will open for the presentation of some 284 papers on scientific research in the Old Dominion. Both the number and the quality of the reports, VAS officials say, make this year's meeting the most comprehensive science gathering ever held in Virginia.

Science section meetings, all at Hotel Roanoke here, will be continued on Saturday morning to accommodate some 41 papers that could not be programmed in Friday's section meetings. Science field trips and inspection tours will conclude the events Saturday afternoon.

A featured event, the academy's annual dinner and presentation of its J. Shelton Horsley Research Award, will be held at 7:30 p. m. Friday in the ballroom of the hotel. Presiding will be Dr. Boyd Harshbarger, VPI statistician and president of the Virginia Academy of Science.

Architects Honor Photographer Steichen

Nearly 2000 of the country's leading architects opened their eighty-second annual convention here yesterday by honoring several men for outstannding accomplishments in design and other arts.

At crowded Mayflower Hotel ceremonies, members saw the American Institute of Architects' fine arts award go to Edward Steichen, famed photographer, for his "outstanding work in connection with his photographic records of both world wars."

Ralph Walker, president of the organization, hailed Steichen as "a master of photography." A Navy captain in the last war, Steichen is especially known for his dramatic shots in the film "Fighting Lady."

The AIA craftsmanship award was given to Joseph Gardiner Reynolds, jr., for his "distinguished work in stained glass design" in churches throughout the world.

Public Showing Through Friday

Representative examples of both men's work will be on public showing at the local AIA offices, 1741 New York ave. nw., through Friday when the convention closes.

Honorary memberships to the organization were awarded to two Washingtonians — Miss Harlean James, executive secretary of the American Planning and Civic Association, and F. Stuart Fitzpatrick, manager of the United States Chamber of Commerce's construction and civic development department.

The AIA also announced top award for distinguished residential and commercial work for 1950.

French Ambassador Henri Bonnet was the keynote speaker at yesterday's opening session.

He expressed the hope that western Europe will be united "in a community of nations which no aggression from within or without will dare threaten."

"Solidarity" Stressed

The French Ambassador stressed the need for continued "solidarity" between the democratic nations.

In an afternoon talk on "Climate and Planning of Settlements," Dr. Helmut E. Landsberg, meteorology expert with the Research and Development Board here, gave prospective Washington home builders a few tips on where to locate.

Every hill, forest, and water surface cause noticeable climatic modifications, said Landsberg, and Washingtonians may spare themselves at least some summer discomfort by taking these location suggestions:

1. Build your house on a lower slope, protected from air pollution, "where we can take advantage of the drainage of cool air."
2. Have shade trees to the west and southwest for protection against summer sunshine, yet giving the benefits of winter radiation after the leaves have fallen.
3. Have free access for the prevailing south and southwest winds to afford summer ventilation.
4. Have terrain protection and dense evergreen vegetation to the northwest to cut down prevailing northwest winter winds.

The program for the rest of the week will include symposiums on urban planning and new trends in architecture and lighting.

Legion of Valor to Hear National Commander

James G. Walsh of Boston, Mass., national commander of the Army and Navy Legion of Valor, will speak at 8:30 p. m. today at a meeting of the District chapter of the order. The meeting will be at Admiral Peary Ship No. 427, 1300 Massachusetts ave. nw.

All holders of the Congressional Medal of Honor, Distinguished Service Cross, and Navy Cross, whether members of the Legion of Valor or not, are invited to attend.

Restaurant Fined $25 For Labor Law Violation

Municipal Court Judge Aubrey Fennell yesterday fined the Fairfax Restaurant, 3837 Pennsylvania ave. se., $25 for violations of the eight-hour-day law for women.

Co-owner Pedro Otero pleaded guilty to the charges, involving failure to keep time records for women employed in the restaurant.

Chaplains Plan Memorial

The Military Chaplains Association yesterday approved a 10-million-dollar memorial of four buildings to be erected in Washington.

Approval came on the second day of the association's nineteenth convention at the Shoreham Ho . More than 200 chaplains of the Protestant, Roman Catholic and Jewish faiths are attending the meetings.

The proposed memorial would consist of four buildings in a quadrangle. Three distinct chapels, one for each of the major religious groups, are planned. A fourth building will contain offices of the Chaplains Association.

Plans for financing the memorial and selection of its exact location have not been completed.

Francis H. Russell, director of the office of public affairs of the Department of State, told the chaplains that "there has always been a closer relationship between religion and foreign policy than has been apparent on the surface."

That relationship, he said, "has never been as integral, as central, as it is today."

At a luncheon session, Gen. George C. Marshall, wartime Chief of Staff who now heads the American Red Cross, emphasized "the tremendous importance" to the armed forces of an effective chaplaincy.

The Rev. Edmund A. Walsh, regent of the Georgetown University Foreign Service School, told the chaplains that the Russian revolution is a continuing thing with always the same aims and objections—"world domination and the crushing of the Christian concept."

The convention will conclude today. Final event on the program is a banquet at 7 p.m. at which an award for "spiritual leadership" will be presented in absentia to Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

How women over 35 can look younger!

"YOUR HUSBAND LOOKS AT YOU WITH NEW INTEREST"

A Frank Statement about Estrogenic Hormones
by Helena Rubinstein

"Estrogenic Hormones are the most effective agents yet discovered for helping women to look younger."

I believe, with all my heart, that Estrogenic Hormones can make you look younger. So I have taken this space to tell women over 35 what they can expect from my Estrogenic Hormone preparations.

While leading scientists have carried out exhaustive experiments with Estrogenic Hormone Cream, I have been using my own skin as a testing ground.

More than 20 years ago I started applying Hormone cream to my own skin. Since then I have observed the effects on thousands of other women. All this time, too, I have kept abreast of hormone studies in universities, and in my own laboratories.

Dramatic Proof

We now have dramatic proof that Estrogenic Hormones can often bring about a decided improvement in the appearance of dry, oldish skin.

One of the many important tests which have contributed to this proof took place recently at a leading university in New England.

1. The hands of twenty-five women between the ages of 35 and 55 were placed under scientific observation for six months.
2. Two different creams were applied to their hands daily. One cream contained Estrogenic Hormones. The other did not. The creams looked identical. Even the doctors making the study did not know which hands received the Estrogenic Hormone Cream!
3. At the end of 6 months the doctors formed their conclusion: "The skin of the left hands (with one or two exceptions) looked fuller, less wrinkled, more youthful."
4. It was then learned by the experimenting doctors, that Estrogenic Hormone Cream was the one which had been used on these younger looking left hands!

Yes, we now have proof that these Estrogenic Hormone preparations can safely give women younger-looking skin.

Important to Women Over 35

If you are over 35, then you must realize that your skin is steadily losing its youth-giving substances.

Estrogenic Hormones are natural substances. And they really work in a very simple way. When gently massaged into your skin, they make your under-skin fill out. This in turn stretches the outer-skin. When this happens, tiny lines become less visible. Your skin, as the doctors reported, looks "fuller, less wrinkled, more youthful."

You can thank science for making Estrogenic Hormones available in cosmetic form.

Works in Two Ways

My Estrogenic Hormone Cream works in two ways to help your skin look more youthful. It works from within...as your skin absorbs the natural estrogenic hormones. And it works from without...as its rich emollients smooth away dryness, help you recapture that young look.

But these admirable results don't happen overnight. Even though women tell me they note an improvement after only one week... I always advise them to try out my Estrogenic Hormone Cream and Oil for at least 3 months.

But even at the end of 30 days, I am sure you will note a real change—a younger-looking skin.

A Thrilling Experience

If you are over 35 it is a thrilling experience when you begin to look younger. Compliments come your way. "What have you been doing to yourself?" ask your friends. You yourself are gloriously aware that you look prettier, brighter. You have a new assurance. A new poise. Your husband looks at you with new interest. Life suddenly seems more exciting.

What woman doesn't want to enjoy years of such happy fulfillment? You can keep up the good work by continuing to use my Estrogenic Hormone beauty products.

Flood of Counterfeit Money Laid to 2 Arrested in Buffalo

Buffalo, N. Y., May 10 (U.P.)—Secret Service agents raided a private home in suburban Depew today and arrested two men. They said the arrest broke up the largest counterfeiting ring ever to operate in the United States and Canada.

[In Washington, Secret Service Chief U. E. Baughman said the ring had printed $500,000 in counterfeit Canadian bills and about $5000,000 in United States money. He said about $45,000 in the counterfeit United States $10 and $20 bills were passed in 28 States.

[Two of the 62 "passers" in the ring passed phony money along the F st. shopping section in February, he said, later being arrested in New Orleans.—Editor's note.]

Edwin Manning, agent in charge of the Buffalo Secret Service office, said the raiders seized a quantity of engraved plates and a press which had been used to print more than one million dollars in American and Canadian currency.

Those arrested were identified as Bernard Neuner, 30, Buffalo, and Matthew Zoldinski, 37, a printer in whose home the raid took place.

The two were held for arraignment on charges of manufacture and possession of counterfeit money.

Manning identified Neuner as the engraver of the counterfeiting plates. He said Zlodinsk had done the printing.

Today's raid followed by three weeks the arrests of two Buffalo men described by Secret Service agents as ringleaders of the Nationwide counterfeiting ring. The two, Sam Salli and Anthony Iraci, now are awaiting trial in New York City on counterfeiting charges.

Manning said the ring had been printing counterfeit $10 and $20 bills in American and Canadian currency.

He said the Canadian bills first appeared on Labor Day of 1949.

The counterfeit American bills first appeared in New York City late last January, he said. More than $200,000 in the fake bills were purchased by an undercover Secret Service agent in New York on January 26, 1950, and persons connected with that sale now are serving prison terms ranging up to 25 years. A total of more than 100 persons has been arrested across the country in connection with the ring's operations, Manning said.

President Hawks Fair Deal 'Dreams'

ernment expenses at the cost of our national security or national progress."

It was at his first stop of the day, at Pocatello, Idaho, not far from the Arco reactor testing station the Atomic Energy Commission is building, that he promised again to put the atomic giant to peaceful work.

"We are not going to be destroyed," he said. "We are going to use this great energy for the welfare and benefit of the human race."

Deep into last night, Mrs. Truman and his daughter, Margaret had appeared with the President at every call, but this morning's daybreak speech found them missing from the platform.

When they failed to step out from the familiar blue velvet curtains, the crowd shouted for them.

The early-rising President grinned.

"You don't expect Bess and Margaret to be up at this hour of the morning, do you?" he said.

At every water tower he promised to come back later to do some "politicking." What he is doing now, he insisted, is "reporting to the Nation on its condition" just as he is required by the Constitution to report to Congress.

But at his last stop in Wyoming, Mayor Sam Tully of Rawlins grabbed the microphone to predict Mr. Truman will run in 1952 and be elected for another four years.

Tonight's Pendleton speech was in fact a report on the economic state of the Union, with earlier figures brought up to date.

In January he told Congress the Nation's annual output of goods and services could be raised to 300 billion dollars by 1955. Tonight's estimate raised it to 350 billion by 1960. Mr. Truman's economic aides said the current national income rate is 258 billion.

He told the thriving farmers of Idaho and Oregon that economic conditions will steadily get better unless "timid people" slow the Fair Deal's "bold, progressive measures to achieve an abundant and expanding economy.

He left no doubt that the "timid" folk he was talking about were Republicans. He said they are the same ones now labeling his program "statism and socialism."

"Now they are saying the same old things—that the country is going bankrupt, that depression lies ahead, and that the only thing to do is to pull in our belts and save what we can from the wreckage," he said.

"I don't agree with them. We can continue to rely on the programs that have served so well for the last 17 years—use them and improve them. I face the future with confidence. I believe profoundly that this forward movement is going to continue."

Profits Rise Forecast

Business profits as well as farm and city living standards will continue to rise if private business and Government meet the challenge, he argued.

To achieve these goals, he said, (1) private owners should increase industrial efficiency, capacity and investment, (2) purchasing power must be expanded (3) the Government must maintain a "sound" balance in its programs and (4) we must continue to improve our economic relations with the rest of the world.

Warning against cuts in world programs, he hit again at "those who would retreat into isolationism in order to save a few dollars.

"We would pay for that folly many times over," he said. "It would greatly increase the chances of a third world war."

A "better living for all our people," he said, "should ultimately be reflected in "the farthermost corners of the earth."

At Shoshone, Idaho, where a crowd of about 2000 turned out, he plugged again for the Brannan Plan, and called the present price-support law only a "partial solution."

He urged the Idaho farmers to "rise up and demand" that Congress "authorize both marketing quotas and direct production payments, in order to support potato prices without accumulating wasteful surpluses."

Here he charged that "those people who control the methods of communication want to see the farm program ruined and put out of business."

"I came out here to tell you what the facts are because nobody else will tell you what the facts are," he said.

At Glenns Ferry, Idaho, about 2500 showed up at the station. There he stressed the "very direct connection between farm prosperity and world peace."

He said he had a hard time convincing some people in 1948 "that I was on the right track and for their benefit."

"But I did convince them and we did win," he said.

Would 'Convince World'

"Now we want to convince the world in exactly the same manner that we are on the right track, and we will win—because I think God is with us in that enterprise."

About 4000 persons crowded around the rear platform at Boise, Idaho's capital city. There Mr. Truman revived one of his 1948 synonyms for Republicans—"Mossbacks". He told the crowd the "Mossbacks" tried to block the Columbia River valley development just as they fought the Tennessee Valley Authority. It would have been difficult to win World War II without both of these valley developments, he said.

Mr. Truman told an even larger turnout at Nampa, Idaho, that "it seems the crowds are getting better, the weather better, and the reception more cordial, as I go along." He told the audience that "if America stays strong, I am sure that Almighty God is going to give us an opportunity to maintain peace in the world."

At Ontario, the first stop in Oregon, the President noted that for the first time in the history of that State more Democrats were registered than Republicans.

Democrats have a lead of about 9000 among the some 700,000 voters enrolled in Oregon.

Despite the big registration, Democratic strategists generally conceded there is little chance of stopping Senator Wayne Morris (R., Oreg.) in November if he wins the May 19 Republican primary.

Mr. Truman nonetheless told the Ontario crowd: "I'm glad that registration figures indicate a growing interest in political affairs. I'm not on a political tour, you understand.

Sounds Little Hoarse

The President sounded a little hoarse at Huntington, Baker and La Grande, the last three stops in Oregon's Blue Mountain country. For three days' running he has average 10 speeches a day.

He told one crowd he wanted them to see "I haven't gone high hat since the 1948 election."

Truman Greets Rivals In Idaho Primary Race

Boise, Idaho, May 10 (Spl.)—Refusing to take sides in the Idaho Senate Democratic primary, President Truman today shook hands at separate stations with two of the most likely contestants.

Former Senator D. Worth Clark mounted the rear platform at Pocatello to be greeted politely by the President. Senator Glenn Taylor (D., Idaho), running mate of Henry Wallace in the last Presidential campaign, received the same polite handshake, on the rear platform at Boise.

GOP Jibes at President and Oft-Dedicated Coulee Dam

By The Associated Press

Senator Cain (R., Wash.) poked fun at President Truman yesterday for going West to dedicate the Grand Coulee Dam after it already had been "dedicated many times."

In fact, Cain said, the dam has been dedicated so often by Democrats that its name ought to be changed to "Dedication Dam" or the "Triple D Dam" for "Democrats' Dedication Dam."

Mr. Truman will carry his Western speech-making tour into Coulee City, Wash., today for ceremonies marking installation of another generator at the dam.

Taking note of this in a speech prepared for the Senate, Cain said Grand Coulee has a "long and meritorious career of partial dedications" starting in 1934 when "President Roosevelt made the first dedication speech."

"Mr. Roosevelt gave the dam another dedicatory going over in 1937," Cain said. "Mr. Truman gave the dam a light dedication touch in June of 1948. It was then he termed the Eightieth Congress the second worst Congress in history."

He said the dam already has thirteen generators and each of them has been "dedicated by somebody." He added:

"It is only a coincidence that all of the somebodies were Democrats and most of them when they were dedicating a generator were either running for some public office or advancing the cause of some other Democrat who was running for or from something."

Cain also took a crack at the cost of the President's tour, which he estimated at $250,000. He said he was certain the President is on a "nonpolitical trip" but wondered who is paying the expense of the 13-car special train.

Cain's speech was one of a series of Republican attacks on Mr. Truman since he started the tour.

Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) said yesterday the Republicans intend to use the Senate as forum to reply to all the President's political talks.

Meanwhile, Republican National Chairman Guy Gabrielson demanded that President Truman cut short his speaking tour and return to Washington immediately to seek a settlement of the four-system rail strike.

He issued this statement:

"The railroads are the economic bloodstream of our Nation. Four of our great transportation systems are paralyzed by a strike. A fifth is harassed and slowed down by President Truman's special train.

"It is the duty of the President to return immediately to the White House. He should use the power and prestige of his office to bring about a peaceful settlement of this costly tie-up of transportation. I hope he will find some other method than his 1946 suggestion that he be given dictatorial powers to draft strikers into the Army."

President Roosevelt's Board said—NO!
President Truman's Board said—NO!
Still the leaders of the Railroad Firemen's Union say—"STRIKE!"

This ridiculous strike is an affront to every citizen of the nation. It's not for more money. It's not because of hours. It's only for soft feather-bedding spots for additional unnecessary firemen to go along in diesel locomotives just for the ride. A leading liberal newspaper calls the demands of the union leaders "horse-feathers"!

● The reckless leaders of the firemen's union want to force down the throats of the railroads and the public a ridiculous "make-work" proposal which has been twice ruled out by Presidential Fact Finding Boards duly appointed under the provisions of the Railway Labor Act.

This demand of union leaders for additional and unnecessary firemen to ride in diesel locomotives was rejected—after months of hearings—by a Board appointed by President Roosevelt in 1943.

It was again rejected in 1949 by a Board appointed by President Truman.

Recent meetings with the National Mediation Board have brought no change in the attitude of the union dictators.

Union Leaders Defy Intent of Law

The union leaders helped write the Railway Labor Act. Yet in an attempt to jam through this scheme of pure "feather-bedding" by leading the members of their union out on strike and threatening paralysis to large areas of the nation, they are defying the spirit and intent of the very law which they helped to create.

This strike is not for higher wages. It is a strike to force the railroads to employ many more thousands of firemen who are not needed! It would be indefensible waste. The railroads have refused to place this additional and unnecessary burden on the public.

But more important than any other consideration, is the action of these few irresponsible union leaders in seeking to force a crippling strike upon the nation for their own selfish purposes.

This strike is one of the silliest strikes in history!

What are these reckless union leaders trying to do? They seek to cause thousands of their members to strike, and throw hundreds of thousands of other employes on and off the railroads out of employment, with loss of pay to them and their families, plus a severe blow to industry and the citizens of the nation.

What's the strike all about? If the union has its way—what happens? The present members of the union won't get one cent more pay. They will merely have been assessed for a costly and indefensible drive in an attempt to provide more dues-paying members for the union by creating "feather-bedding" jobs for additional and unnecessary firemen.

This is certainly one of the silliest strikes in history!

There is no other possible answer to such a demand but "No!"

The railroads in making such a reply believe they have the whole-hearted support of the people in whose interest they are willing to fight this out, despite the loss and inconvenience that all will suffer.

It is time to put an end to such un-American demands.

Johnston, Stalking Truman, Likes to Get Close to Voters

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

Victor A. (Vic) Johnston, who is stalking President Truman across the continent for the Republicans, is regarded here as one of the best political scouts in the business.

His idea of using an airplane, and showing up wherever the Truman Special stops, is characteristic. He likes to get his information first hand. Consequently, when he makes his report to GOP leaders, listing the plus and minus aspects of the President's "nonpolitical" tour, they will know that it is the real low-down.

"Vic" Johnston is well constructed for his job as political technician. A big fellow of 49, with a shock of iron gray hair and a mustache to match, he has energy and stamina that remind old-timers of "Big Jim" Farley in his heyday.

Actually, he looks more like the popular conception of a Senator than many of those he serves as campaign director of the National Republican Senatorial Committee. This brought about an amusing incident in 1947.

Johnston managed Joseph R. McCarthy's campaign in 1946. After McCarthy whipped Robert M. La Follette, jr., in the Republican primary and then went on to get elected as Senator from Wisconsin, "Vic" came to Washington as his executive assistant.

The two called on Senator Taft (R., Ohio), shortly after their arrival, Taft had written a friendly letter to La Follette, but "Vic" thought it was wise to let bygones be bygones, and told McCarthy so. They had to wait a while in an outside room when they got to Taft's office.

Taft finally came out. Seeing the two men, he headed for Johnston.

'Senator, I'm delighted to meet you," the Ohioan said, pumping Johnston's hand.

"Well, here's the Senator here," said the embarrassed executive assistant, and motioned toward McCarthy, his boss.

"Vic," who was born on a North Dakota farm of Scotch highland parents, served with the AEF in France in World War I. Not long thereafter, in 1922, he came to Washington and put in three years on the Capitol police force.

He became friendly with Harold Stassen in the early 1930s, and worked in the campaign that resulted in Stassen's being elected Governor of Minnesota in 1938. Stassen made him publicity director for the State. In 1944 he was lured to Wisconsin by Thomas Coleman, a power in the GOP there, and settled in Madison.

"Vic" was back in the Stassen camp in 1948, serving as national publicity director for the Stassen-for-President campaign.

'Dixiecrat' Leaders Seek Solid South

Jackson, Miss., May 10 (AP). —States Rights Democrats aiming to "throw the planned economy theorists" out of Washington hinged their strategy today on winning a Solid South.

This "plan of action" was announced by Publisher J. Oliver Emmerich of the McComb, Miss., Enterprise-Journal, to the more than 1500 people from 14 States attending the third annual States Rights Convention here.

"None can deny," Emmerich declared in his address, "that our people are being shackled by the planned economy theorists."

"Our task," Emmerich said, "is to sell the people against deficit spending, creeping socialism and the totalitarian state."

The States Righters campaign will seek to weld the South into the Nation's most powerful minority by the 1952 presidential campaign, and through that postion become a national balance of political power.

To attain that objective, a precinct-by-precinct organization will be created striving for full control of all Deep-South States. A proposal by Bob Slimp, a student in Baylor University at Waco, Texas, was incorporated into the plan to use college students as "shock troops" in the door-to-door campaign.

"A united South can be the Nation's most powerful and effective minority," Emmerich said. "Once united, the South has nothing to fear ahead. With the South secure, the Nation is secure—for the South upholds those principles that will preserve a free America."

Emmerich said the States Rights movement has "been smeared with the charge of bigotry and race hatred . . . but the so-called civil rights legislation is an open door to a police state."

The States Rights movement is rights program and the proposed fair employment practices commission supported by President Truman, as well as national administration deficit spending policoies.

"Thus far," Emmerich declared, "the forces that are selling the idea of a welfare state are doing a better job than the forces that are selling the idea and ideal of constitutional government."

"Ours is a selling job," he declared.

The convention reelected former Gov. Ben Laney of Arkansas as chairman of the national states rights executive committee. Vice Chairman Leander Perez of Louisiana and W. W. Wright of Jackson, Miss., were also re-named. Other committeemen are Palmer Bradley of Houston, Tex.; Secretary Ed Lewis of Jackson, Miss.; Treasurer George Wallace of Jackson, Miss., and former Gov. Frank Dixon of Alabama.

closing of debate "as vigorously as I know how."

Russell complained that FEPC opponents, although charged with filibustering against the measure, have actually had little chance to present their major speeches because the Senate has been spending much of its time on other matters.

Senator Hubert Humphrey (D., Minn.) took the floor late yesterday to argue in support of President Truman's plan to abolish the office of NLRB general counsel, now held by Robert L. Denham.

Humphrey charged the present set-up in NLRB with being a "sawed-in-half administrative monstrosity."

He said the independent general counsel can "fairly" be charged with acting as "grand jury, judge and prosecutor."

Earlier in the day Senator Herbert H. Lehman (L.-Lib.) of New York urged speedy action on the FEPC bill.

"From now on it will be our performance, not our politics that will count on this issue. Our standing in the world and our influence in international relationships are as much at stake on the FEPC bill as on any measure which has or will be before us for consideration and action.

"The simple concept that no man has a right to deny his fellow man the opportunity to earn a living for reasons of race, color, creed or national origin is so elementary in a free democratic society that millions of people both here and abroad must wonder what has prevented us from enacting this legislation long ago."

N. Y. Grand Jury Gets Wm. Remington Case

New York, May 10 (NYHT).—The special Federal grand jury that has been investigating espionage here is looking into the case of William Remington, Department of Commerce employe cleared by the Government's loyalty board, it was reliably reported today.

It was reported that several witnesses in this new inquiry by the grand jury in United States District Court have been subpenaed.

mittee suspended for lunch. At that time, confirming what he said before, Tydings told newsmen:

"We've got everything — FBI, QXY and everything—the whole damn thing. So there will be no excuses this time."

Peurifoy Denies Tampering

And Deputy Undersecretary of State John E. Peurifoy, who was with the Senators in their examination, told reporters he was prepared to testify under oath that "there has been absolutely no tampering with the files."

The "81 cases" are those listed by McCarthy in a Senate speech February 20, when he gave the first detailed outline to support earlier charges that he knew the names of 205—and later, 57—card-carrying Communists in the State Department.

In his speech, McCarthy implied that most of the 81 were pro-Communist in sympathy or activity.

Later, McCarthy said he would stand or fall on his charges according to the findings with respect to Owen Lattimore, the well-known Far East expert. Lattimore was not one of the 81 cases.

Yesterday, however, McCarthy switched to a new target, the "Case Number Two" that he mentioned February 20. It concerns a United States minister to a Central European country.

May Reveal Name

McCarthy said he may give the man's name to the Senate unless the Tydings subcommittee shows signs of really loking into the case.

The description — although not the accusations — McCarthy has given of the man could apply to John Carter Vincent, American Minister to Switzerland.

Vincent, who was formerly in the State Department's Far Eastern Division, has incurred the enmity of those backing McCarthy, particularly the so-called China lobby which objects to all policy not in full support of the Chinese Nationalist Government.

McCarthy has mentioned Vincent as a member of the State Department group that he alleges sold China "down the river."

As a result of these references, many defenders of Vincent and his loyalty have already spoken up. Former Secretary of State George C. Marshall is reported ready to come to Vincent's immediate defense if McCarthy should make a public attack.

After yesterday's inspection of the files, Peurifoy told newsmen that the State Department has no evidence that would "even remotely substantiate" McCarthy's charge as made in his February 20 speech, that the U. S. envoy served as contact man in a Russian spy ring.

Congressional Board Urged

At the Capitol yesterday, Senator Malone (R., Nev.), urged that Congress establish a loyalty review board whose members would have to be approved by the Senate.

Under the present loyalty setup, there is a top board which reviews actions of department boards on loyalty cases. The members of this review board were appointed by the President without submission of their names to the Senate.

"Although the President's Loyalty Review Board includes some men of fine character, I regret to say that the board itself is not above reproach," Malone said in a statement.

Malone said he was reliably informed that William Ludwig Ullman gave the name of Harry W. Blair, Washington attorney and a member of the President's Loyalty Review Board, as a reference when applying for a Government job.

"Later," he said, "Ullman was accused of being a member of the espionage group which conveyed information from the files of the State Department here to agents of the Soviet Union, and when Ullman was subpenaed and asked questions pertaining to those charges he refused to answer on the ground of self-incrimination."

Ullman was named by Miss Elizabeth T. Bentley, a self-acknowledged one-time Communist courier, to the House Un-American Activities Committee as a member of a Communist espionage ring.

Blair, asked for comment on Malone's assertion, said he did give Ullman a recommendation in 1936 or 1937 for a job in the Treasury Department. He said he had known Ullman's family in Springfield, Mo. (Blair comes from Joplin) and knew Ullman at that time as a "nice kid."

Blair added: "Ullman got mixed up with this fellow Silvermaster and that bunch of Communists—some in the Treasury and some in the State Department. I didn't know anything about it at the time."

One of those Miss Bentley said she worked with was a man named Nathan Silvermaster.

Malone said "there is no denying that the President's Loyalty Review Board has cleared persons subsequently found to be poor security risks."

Draper Aided Reds, He Says

Hartford, Conn., May 10 (U.P.).—Paul Draper, the dancer, admitted today that he performed one show for New Masses, which he said was a Communist publication.

But he told a Federal jury that he got the "smallish fee" of $300 for his appearance and that he found the rest of the show, which featured singer Paul Robeson and a dramatization of a pro-Russian book, to be "revolting."

He also said that he had appeared at one rally sponsored by the National Council of American-Soviet Friendship, which had been cited by the Attorney General as a subversive group.

Judge J. Joseph Smith, hearing evidence in the $200,0000 libel suit of Draper and harmonica player Larry Adler against Mrs. Hester R. McCullough of Greenwich, who called the entertainers pro-Communist, refused to admit as exhibits two Communist publications that carried advertisements for the rally.

Most of the morning hearing was consumed with cross-examination of Draper concerning the dancer's mother, Mrs. Muriel Draper. He reiterated that she was not a Communist Defense Attorney C. Driscoll Grimes asked him whether she was a pro-Communist.

"I have never discussed that with her," he replied. "I was not concerned with the classification of her philosophy."

Grimes listed at least a score of organizations that he said were subversive and with which he claimed Mrs. Draper had been connected. Draper denied any knowledge of his mother's activities in these groups.

"I am telling you the truth," he said. "I have no sure knowledge" that she was connected with any of the organizations.

He said he knew his mother was in Moscow last fall as a delegate to a conference that Grimes said was held by the Women's International Democratic Federation. Grimes said this group had been cited as a "Red international organization" by the California House Un-American Committee. Grimes further told the jury that Mrs. Robeson, wife of the singer, also was a delegate to this affair.

Nixon Has Confidence In Dr. Oppenheimer

Oakdale, Calif., May 10 (U.P.). Representative Richard Nixon (R., Calif.), a member of the House Un-American Activities Committee, said today he has "complete confidence" in the loyalty of Dr. J. Robert Oppenheimer.

"I am convinced that Dr. Oppenheimer has been and is a completely loyal American to whom the people of the United States owe a great debt of gratitude for his tireless and magnificent job in atomic research," Nixon said. He is here on a campaign tour in connection with his Senate candidacy.

2d Witness Tags Oppenheimer

Oakland, Calif., May 10 (U.P.).—A second former Communist testified at a State legislative committee hearing today that J. Robert Oppenheimer, leading atomic scientist, attended a Communist meeting.

The witness, Alfred Barbosa of San Leandro, Calif., identified Oppenheimer as one of the 50 to 75 persons present at a housewarming given at the Berkeley, Calif., home of Kenneth May, a former University of California professor.

Barbosa said all of the persons present were Communists. He said he identified Oppenheimer from a photograph shown to him later by a Federal agency.

He made the sworn statements before the California State Senate Committee on Un-American Activities.

Barbosa was preceded on the stand by William Schneidermann, identified as head of the California Communist Party, who refused to answer the 45 to 50 questions put to him. The committee voted to cite him for contempt.

Barbosa said he was taken to the meeting by Paul and Sylvia Crouch in a car supplied by the Communist Party. The Crouches were at the time members of the Communist Party.

Senator Nathan Combs, Napa, Calif., opened the day's proceedings by reading into the record the denial of the scientist, who headed the battery of brains that constructed the atom bomb during the war, that he had attended a 1941 meeting of the party.

Women Urged To Flee Flood At Winnipeg

Winnipeg, Manitoba, May 10 (U.P.).—The Canadian army urged the immediate evacuation of all women and children from flooded Winnipeg today as the rampaging Red River threatened to cut off the city's electricity and food supply.

The Royal Canadian Mounted Police ordered all 14,000 residents of suburban St. Vital to leave their flooded homes in Canada's biggest mass evacuation. They were granted three days to depart.

Mounties worked around the clock to evacuate every resident along a 65-mile stretch or river valley between here and Emerson, to the south.

The army estimated 20,000 persons already had fled by train, bus, truck and row boat. They didn't know where they were going, but they packed what they could carry in suitcases and shopping bags and left.

Brig. R. E. A. Morton, director of flood relief, said:

"Unfortunately, we can only forecast a rise in the river and more trouble."

Morton warned it would become increasingly difficult to maintain adequate sanitation and hygiene. All central heating already has been shut off, he said, and he feared an interruption in the supply of milk for babies. Residents were asked to take as few baths as possible and turn on lights only when necessary.

Baptists Ask Truman to End Rome Mission

Chicago, May 10 (NYHT).—President Truman was petitioned today by the 10,000 delegates to the ninety-third annual session of the Southern Baptist Convention to terminate the presidential representation at the Vatican.

Although the Vatican post has been vacant since Myron Taylor's resignation in January, the President has not indicated whether he will appoint a successor or abolish the office which was set up by Franklin D. Roosevelt.

The petition, unanimously adopted by the delegates meeting in the Coliseum here, was introduced by Dr. Louie D. Newton, former Baptist president. The petition, which was also sent to Secretary of State Acheson and members of the Senate, said presidential representation at the Vatican, "described originally as a war emergency, without the approval of Congress, has alarmed and disturbed our people and will, if allowed to continue, thrust upon our Nation a bitter struggle in maintaining the wall separating church and state.

The Roman Catholic Church was also criticized in a report to the delegates from the Joint Conference Committee on Public Relations, directed by Dr. Joseph M. Dawson of Washington. A section of this report, entitled "Clouds Over North America," charged that the "Roman Catholic Church-State" exerts powerful control over the American press and radio since "members of the Roman church hold strategic positions in nearly all of the large periodicals and daily papers."

In a speech to the convention, Dr. Dawson claimed that 76 of 99 governmental grants to denominational hospitals under the Hill-Burton Act were to Roman Catholic institutions.

St. Lawrence Bill Returned to Shelf

By The Associated Press

The St. Lawrence seaway and power bill was put back in Congress' deep-freeze yesterday.

The House Public Works Committee ended nearly three weeks of hearing testimony on a bill to authorize the long-discussed 800-million-dollar-plus international development. That laid the measure to rest for the balance of 1950.

Even before the hearing ended, the committee voted not to act on the bill until it first is considered by the Senate — something that won't happen at least until next year.

The committee, which heard only testimony favorable to the project, heard Senator Lehman (D., Lib-N. Y.) say yesterday that "further delay in the approval of this project is untenable."

New York and adjoining states, he said, could use all the power generated at both sites.

He said refusal to authorize the project amounts to neglect of an opportunity to "bring new riches to our people and to the world."

Pentagon Asks Hearing On Bus Hike Requests

The Department of Defense yesterday told the Interstate Commerce Commission it should hold a public hearing on requests by the AB&W and Arnold Bus Lines seeking increases in "Pentagon fares."

Both companies have asked the Interstate Commerce Commission to exempt the 10-cent fare between Washington and Government installations in Virginia, from a special ICC order. Their request, if granted, would pave the way for an increase. The Defense Department contention was in a brief filed with the ICC.

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

SINCE the opening game when he was more or less called upon to serve the social amenities by shaking hands with President Truman, Bucky Harris has not showed his face to the Nats' public at Griffith Stadium. But he has been doing some powerful manipulating in the shelter of the dugout.

The guy who ventured a month ago that the Nats would win 9 of their first 16 games would have been hauled away to the batty ward, but there they are in a third place tie and yapping at the leaders, and you'd have to say Harris has done a fair job with 'em.

POVICH

He's lost his zest for ranting at the umpires, perhaps, and at his age he is no longer fond of wearing what he has called "the short pants monkey suit" of the ball player. Before this, he had been supposing that he'd be directing somebody's big league club from the front office. But he hasn't lost that touch of genius that won him three American League pennants.

Not that the Nats are going to win a pennant under Harris. But they're acting like a pretty good ball team under his direction, and they're acting, too, as if they're rid of their inferiority complexes.

WHAT HARRIS has been doing is fronting for the whole gang, with a let-me-handle-this approach to the night's business, and taking the pressure off his ball players. His willingness to take the raps, if necessary, has been making it just wonderful. He's been so correct thus far, that his ball players are looking up to him with the feeling nothing very wrong can happen with Harris around.

If Harris is nice to his ball players, and he is, there's a reason for that, too. They've been hustling for him and that's all he demands.

He once expressed his own philosophy on that score when he said, "I don't get mad at bad ball players. The players who annoy me are the ones who have the ability and don't put out."

One by one, Harris has won his players over. He has been giving 'em all a shot at the white alley. Even against what looked like the percentages. But Bucky says, "I've got to live with these guys all season, and I'll take a chance on blowing one ball game to keep their spirits up."

HE WAS TAKING that chance with Sid Hudson the other night when he left him in the box against the Indians with the bases full, and was rewarded when Hudson got himself out of the mess. "Winning it that way after I showed my confidence in him was more important to me and Hudson than if he had pitched a no-hitter."

Harris was tolerant to the extreme, too, when the White Sox pounced on young Lloyd Hittle with five hits in the seventh inning a couple of nights ago. But with the bases still full and Hittle still holding a one-run lead, Harris took the big gamble again. He left Hittle in and saw him fan Luke Appling for the big out.

"I was thinking of the long haul over the season when I left Hittle in," said Harris. "I wanted to see him get squared away if he could. He could be a big help to us with a little more self-assurance and that's what I was aiming for. One more hit off Hittle, and I'd have been a bum, I guess, but those are the raps I have to take."

WHEN HE finally decided on the infield switch that moved Sam Dente to second base after Merrill Combs was obtained from Boston to play shortstop, Harris put it up to Dente very neatly. He had never seen Dente play second base, and in fact the fellow never had since 1946.

When Dente declared he could play second base, Harris said simply, "Okay, Sam, I'm taking your word for it, and I think you're an honest guy."

The Nats liked Joe Kuhel, too, but they never did escape the feeling that he was a rookie manager. They never see Harris register any panic. He's been running major league ball clubs so long, his managerial reflexes are second nature. With Harris around they feel a wonderful sense of security, which the psychology people always did say is a big help in any pursuit.

Marrero Hurls, Bats Griffs to 7-6 Victory

batted for Grasso. Stewart tripled high off the right field wall. Marrero doubled to center.

Marrero never let go after taking over that one-run lead. Saved by the Chisox base running in the seventh, he was in trouble in the eighth when he balked Phil Masi to second base with one out, after Masi had singled to left. Bucky Harris sent his Cuban interpreter, Bob Ortiz, to the mound to caution Marrero, and the pitcher buckled down anew to his work.

Fans Carrasquel

His next act was to shove a third strike past Alex (Chico) Carrasquel to record that rookie's first major league strikeout, and then he got rid of Pinch Hitter Dave Philley on a pop-up, on the next pitch.

Marrero negotiated the first two big outs in the ninth by fanning Busby on three pitches in a switch from his curve ball to his fast one. He calmly disposed of Appling on a pop-up, but Michaels beat out a hit to deep short to put the tying run on. Unruffled, the Cuban lured Zernial into hitting a game-ending fly to Noren.

Nagy's fourth start of the season was short-lived. The Sox clubbed him for two runs in the first on Appling's single, Michaels' long double to left, and a single to left by Majeski.

They jolted him for three more runs quickly in the second, after Masi beat out a bunt and Carrasquel singled. Kuzava also laid one down and beat it out, but it merely filled the bases. Busby flied to O'Brien, and Masi was safe at home when Grasso let the throw go through for an error. Appling singled home two more runs.

Marrero Takes Charge

That's when Marrero moved in. He got the Nats out of further trouble right away by luring Michaels into hitting a double-play grounder at Yost.

The only run Marrero gave up was in the White Sox fourth after his control deserted him for the only time and he issued quick passes to the first two he faced. Two infield outs got the run home.

The Nats pecked away at Kuzava for a run after he walked a pair in the first inning. Mele's single to left scored Noren. They got another in the third when Noren tripled off the right-field wall and moved home on Robinson's grounder to Carrasquel.

Came the fifth, though, and Kuzava's 6-2 lead blew up in his unhappy face.

IN SHORT . . . The Nats take leave of Griffith Stadium after today's finale with the White Sox, until May 27 . . . Joe Haynes will get another starting chance this afternoon against Bob Pearce, Sox lefthander . . . The Nats have mapped their way through the West by air if the train strike gets serious . . . Tom O'Brien, late of the Red Sox, didn't distinguish himself in the second inning when his delayed throw to the plate with the bases full precipitated two Chicago runs . . . Manager Jack Onslow squawked vigorously to Umpire in Chief Bill McKinley that Marrero was balking with a non-stop motion . . . Bucky Harris sent word to the Cuban pitcher not to get excited about it . . . Irv Noren, whose batting average has been sagging, at least is bunting 1.000 for the season. The one he beat out last night was his first attempt to lay it down.

Cincy Blanks Dodgers, 4-0; Phillies Back Into First

Cincinnati, May 10. (AP)—The Cincinnati Reds and Ken Raffensberger both broke losing streaks tonight with a 4-0 victory over Brooklyn that knocked the Dodgers out of the National League lead.

Raffensberger's sparkling three-hit performance gave him his first victory in five starts and it ended a string of seven straight defeats for the Reds.

The idle Philadelphia Phils backed into first place in the National League by virtue of the Brooklyn defeat.

"Preacher" Roe and Raffensberger waged a neck-and-neck battle for five innings before doubles by Grady Hatton, Bobby Usher and Virgil Stallcup brought the Reds their first two runs in the sixth frame.

Roe was relieved for a pinch-hitter in the seventh, and Cincinnati broke the game wide open in the eighth against Rex Barney as the Dodger defense cracked for three errors. Those miscues, coupled with singles by Stallcup and Homer Howell, brought in the last two runs.

Cards Win, 5-1; Musial Belts Four for Four

St. Louis, May 10 (AP).—Jumping into the lead with three runs on four singles in the third inning, the St. Louis Cardinals backed up Max Lanier's seven-hit pitching for a 5-to-1 victory over the New York Giants tonight.

The triumph put the Redbirds in a second place tie with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Stan Musial continued to lead both leagues with four safeties out of four official trips, boosting his average to .500 for 16 games. He walked another time.

Eddie Stanky was ordered from the game for rthe second time in as many days for beefing to an umpire.

Guerra's Error Decisive

Tribe's 3 Runs in 9th With 2 Out Top A's, 6-4

Philadelphia, May 10 (AP).—Three unearned runs with two out in the ninth inning helped Cleveland snap a four-game losing streak tonight with a 6-4 victory over Philadelphia as right hander Bob Lemon received credit for his third pitching victory.

Catcher Mike Guerra's error on a play at the plate set off Cleveland's winning rally. Replacing starter Bobby Shantz, right-handed Bob Hooper retired the first two hitters. Then came a Lou Boudreau single and Cleveland's manager gave way to pinch-runner Roberto Avila. When outfielder Sam Chapman slipped on the wet turf while fielding Jim Hegan's single, Coach Al Simmons waved Avila on to the plate.

Chapman's relay had Avila by at least 15 feet and Guerra put the tag on Cleveland's pinch-runner. Umpire Eddie Rommel waved Avila out but changed his decision when Guerra dropped the ball. Lemon's double then chased Hegan across and Cleveland's pitcher tallied a moment later on Hooper's wild pitch.

Braves Get Cooper; Reds Buy Ramsdell

Cincinnati, May 10 (AP).—The oft-beaten Cincinnati Reds started cleaning house today with three deals in less than 12 hours.

They traded Catcher Walker Cooper to the Boston Braves for Infielder Connie Ryan. They sold Second Baseman Jimmy Bloodworth to the Philadelphia Phils and finished off the day's market operations by buying pitcher Willard Ramsdell from the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The deal for Ramsdell, a right-handed knuckle ball hurler, was completed only shortly before the Reds and the Dodgers were to open a series here in a night game.

Ramsdell, 32 years old and from Kiowa, Kans., won 18 games and lost 12 with Hollywood of the Pacific Coast League last year. Reds officials declined to say the amount of cash involved but said "it was a good hunk of dough."

The deal with the Phils for Bloodworth was for a sum reported to be in excess of the $10,000 waiver price.

Unearned Runs Help Cubs to Top Braves, 6-3

Chicago, May 10 (AP).—The Chicago Cubs profited by four errors to trounce the Boston Braves, 6 to 3, today in the opener of a two-game series. It was the seventh defeat in 12 starts for the Braves in their first Western invasion.

Doyle Lade and Paul Minner collaborated in a six-hit pitching job that had the Braves smothered in all except the sixth inning when they tallied all their runs.

Warren Spahn went the route for the Braves and suffered his second loss against four victories. He was raked for nine hits. But the four errors, in which he also had a guilty hand, were too much to overcome.

Mrs. Glick Ousted, 3-2

Virginia Beach, Va., May 10 (AP). Polly Riley of Fort Worth, Tex., today swept into the quarterfinals of the thirty-fifth amateur championship of the Women's Southern Golf Association with a 3 and 2 victory over Mrs. Maurice Glick of Baltimore, Md.

The other favorites won, too, leaving the tournament without a real upset during its first two days of match play.

Dorothy Kirby of Atlanta routed the Virginia State women's champion, Sydney Elliott of Charlottesville, 8 and 7, and Mary Lena Faulk of Thomasville, Ga., the medalist, downed Mrs. Mark McGarry of St. Petersburg, Fla., 4 and 2.

Mary Ann Downey, Maryland champion from Baltimore, defeated Helen Hampton, Chattanooga, Tenn., on the nineteenth hole of a gruelling battle.

From Dr. Tracy to Quartets

Everything But Baseball for Dean on TV

By Red Smith

NEW YORK, MAY 10 (NYHT.).—Due to the Kentucky Derby and other distractions, it wasn't until the Yankees played the Browns Tuesday night that an opportunity arose to check up on the current state of show business' bouncing baby, baseball-by-television.

Red Smith

When the set was switched on, Dizzy Dean and Dr. David F. Tracy, the Svengali of the Browns, were discovered in a dugout up to their hips in an interview.

Dr. Tracy, who has been remolding the psyches of the St. Louis players since they began spring training, was saying that his work with that team was just about finished.

"I've taught them almost as much as they can be taught," he said modestly, and added in the tone which a man uses while washing his hands, "from now on they've got to work it out for themselves."

"Do any players on any other clubs ask for your—er, talk or, ah, help of any kind?" Dizzy inquired.

"None of the players do," Dr. Tracy confessed. "But some of the sports writers tell me they have some players who could use me." It would not be fair to say he seemed aggrieved.

He spoke of a St. Louis pitcher whose repertoire included a gopher ball, and Diz said, "Gopher ball? You mean the hitter swangs and it flies outta the park?" The doctor nodded and Dizzy laughed, saying that he'd thrown a few such pitches in his day, himself.

"WELL," DIZ SAID, "we've just had an ennerview with the doctor here and he's a great guy and a great doctor. There's no question about."

For some moments, there had been a rather bewildering background of sound, bewildering because the ennerview obviously was being conducted in a ball park.

There seemed to be men singing somewhere in the neighborhood. Now the camera picked up home plate, and sure enough there were four guys, coatless and hatless, moaning into a microphone. From somewhere outside the picture, the voice of Dean was heard again:

"Fans, they're still going on down there with the, er, ceremonies. The ball game'll be goin' on in about 10 minutes but they're still goin' on so we're gonna cut you back down there."

Now, besides the coatless quartet, one saw four guys wearing hard straw hats, four others wearing plug dicers, plaid pants and walrus mustaches, four more in T-shirts. They were, it seemed, barber shop harmony groups.

This flabbergasted witness bows to no man, not even Tommy Henrich, in his admiration of barber shop harmony. Provided, that is, it can be heard in a barbershop or a saloon. In a ball park, now——

"WELL," THE comforting accents of Arkansas were heard again. "The Ol' ball game's gonna get under way in a minute." Diz sounded faintly desperate, as if conscience-bound to reassure listeners that there really was going to be a ball game in this ball park.

"But I just wanta tell you the doctor we had on tonight was very ennaresting and we hope you enjoyed it because he was very ennaresting. Well, the boys are still singin' so we'll cut you in again."

"A night in Joon, beneath the mooooon . . ."

"Well, fans," Dizzy said, "I hate to bust in like this but the ol' ball game's gettin' ready to start but remember we'll be back with more ennerviews for you after the game."

Without warning, there appeared on the screen four creatures in baseball uniforms standing with profiles to the camera in what bore some resemblance to a dugout. They sang:

"Call for the batter up;
Call for the play you like;
Call for the triple strike——"

In front of one receiving set, a weak voice said: "They're not

3628 Fans See Jets Beat Jersey In Roller Series

Player-coach Silver Rich led the Washington Jets to a 20-18 victory over the New Jersey Jolters in the opening game of their Roller Derby series, 20-18, before 3628 at Uline Arena last night.

Rich blocked out Jersey's bid for a tie in the final second when he checked a scoring bid by Frank Bael.

Captain Bob Lewis, Washington's scoring leader, set the pace for the winners with a 5 point performance. The same teams meet in the second game of the series at Uline Arena tomorrow night, 8:30 o'clock.

Shah to Get Grid Letter

The Shah of Iran, first monarch to watch a college football game in the United States, will also be the first to receive a varsity football letter.

George Washington University will present the letter to His Imperial Majesty, through his consul here, Col. Gholam Abbas Aran, at its annual awards banquet tomorrow night at the National Press Building.

It's the Shah's reward for serving as G. W.'s honorary captain while the Colonials were beating Georgetown, 28-7, last November at Griffith Stadium. He was touring the United States at the time.

G. W.'s rooting section made up a special cheer for the visitor: "Rah rah, rah, Shah Shah Shah."

Black Phantoms Split at Turner's

The two Black Phantoms split even in co-features of last night's wrestling card at Turner's Arena. Black Phantom No. 1 was thrown out of the ring and counted out after 13 minutes of the first match, and Black Phantom No. 2 pinned Hans Hermann in 14 minutes with a body press.

Raise You Finds Winner's Circle at Pimlico After 2 Years

Bill Bennings . . .

AT PIMLICO

DEAR FOLKS—

Palatine Stable's Chicle 2d, 5-year-old son of Fox Glove and Candy who was bred by A. G. Victoria in the Argentine, has arrived at Pimlico to keep his engagement in Saturday's Dixie Handicap. After three starts in this country last year, Chicle 2d suddenly found his best form during the winter season in Florida where he was claimed by Palatine for $7500. He won both Hialeah's important turf course stakes, the Bougainvillea and the Miami Beach, later scored in the Gulfstream Park Handicap and even more recently was second to Better Self in the Gallant Fox Handicap at Jamaica. Johnny Gilbert probably will have a leg up on the South American in the Dixie, since he has been doing the bulk of the riding for Palatine Stable this spring. See you on the rail—BILL.

Happy Hill's Filly Pays Only $9.40

By Walter Haight
Post Reporter

Pimlico, Md., May 10.—Happy Hill Farm's Raise You, away from the winner's circle since she was a stakes winner as a 2-year-old, found a hard track to her liking today and won the Challedon Purse. The 4-year-old filly, with Richard Rosolle in the saddle, won by two lengths. Brookmeade Stables' Music closed a gap to be second by a neck margin over Mrs. J. V. Stewart's Singing Doll. A field of six competed.

Raise You, aptly named being by the sire Case Ace, was clocked in 1:11 1-5 for the six furlongs over a racing strip probably in the fastest condition in the long history of the Old Hilltop plant. Despite her nonimposing record, Raise You had pretty fair backing and paid $9.40 to win.

Raise You went to the front early, set a good pace, surrendered the lead to Singing Doll at the far turn, regained it approaching the stretch and held on long enough to stave off Music with daylight to spare.

A crowd of 11,070, betting better than usual, saw the program. Although the skies were overcast most of the afternoon, the rain had not come at feature-race time.

The day's secondary feature, the Rhine Maiden, went to Mrs. H. A. Campbell's Wiley Fox by a half length over Thorncliff Farm's Busy Pat. Third in the compact field of five was High Ground Stable's On.

Ridden by Ronnie Nash, Wiley Fox stepped the six furlongs in 1:11, only four-fifths over the track record. The winner paid $5.60 and was in front from flag fall to finish.

Showing better time than the world record for the first half mile, Saggy Farm's Sagagal won the third race at Pimlico today by five lengths. The daughter of War Relic, who pulled a "Your Host" in stopping in a previous test, had a lead of 10 lengths at one stage of the six-furlong test.

The chestnut 3-year-old matched the world mark for a quarter on the straightaway, being clocked in .21 1/5. The best time ever recorded in a four furlong race was .45 2/5 and Sagagal turned in .44 1/5. Her time for the full three-quarters was .1.11 2/5. The track record is 1.10 1/5 shared by the Pincher and Istan.

Of course the filly will not be credited with any official world marks for her part-time brilliance.

Ray Haight Weds Missouri Girl

Ray Haight, Washington racecaster and commentator, and Miss Helen Wagner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gus D. Wagner of Fredericktown, Mo., were married last night at the Keller Memorial Lutheran Church. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Haight. Walter is The Washington Post's racing writer.

The newlyweds, after their honeymoon, will go to Detroit, where Ray will do the public address, radio and television description for the Michigan Racing Association's meeting, which opens May 25.

Yankees. Are—— are these the Browns?"

The wife of the man with the weak voice said, "Wait."

The four creatures turned to face the camera. They had printing on their shirts. Put together, it spelled, "Call for Philip Morris."

Perhaps there was a ball game after that. Who can tell?

At any rate, there's gong to be a game, weather permitting, in Yankee Stadium Saturday afternoon. Saturday is Ed Barrow Day, celebrated in honor of the grand gentleman who became general manager of the Yankees on October 29, 1920, and operated them on a slogan for a quarter of a century. His slogan was: "we have nothing to sell but baseball."

Post Tourney at Manor

Schoolboy Golfers Qualify May 22

By Dave Heller
Post Reporter

QUALIFYING ROUNDS for the seventeenth Annual Washington Post Schoolboy Golf Tournament will be held May 22 at Manor Country Club, Frank Emmet, director of the District Golf Association's junior program, said yesterday.

Semifinalists and finalists will play off their matches in the National Celebrities Tournament at Army Navy June 3-4.

Emmet predicts that the gallery will see some red hot golf.

"We've got some mighty good boys this year," he said. "Take Bill and Bob Wolfe of Devitt, for example.

"Both are strong contenders," he said. "Bill won in 1948 and lost in the finals on the last hole at Army Navy to Dick Foster of Coolidge.

"Foster is playing on the Duke University Golf Team and won't be back this year. Bill should be a good bet, but some of the other boys can't be ignored.

"Take Denny Bolster of Gonzaga. Denny won the Mid-Atlantic PGA Junior Tourney here last year and went all the way to the quarter finals of the national tournament before he got beat.

"He shot a beautiful one-over-par 73 at Prince Georges to win. He's course champion at Rock Creek Public Golf Course, too.

"Don DeLaski of Coolidge, their number one player, has returned from Japan and will compete, as will Hugh Reed of Gonzaga.

"Hank Ford of St. Albans, Kay Fletcher of Roosevelt, Perky Cullinane of St. Johns, and Paul McMahon of Gonzaga are all strong players, capable of walking away with the cup."

Jim Vance, prominent Prince Georges golfer, is quite a boxer. He once lost a split decision to Ezzard Charles, NBA heavyweight champion of the world. Both were welterweights back in 1936 when they met in a Veterans of Foreign Wars tournament. Vance was post welterweight champion of Fort Meade in 1945.

Rock Creek Public Golf Course presented its bowling awards recently . . . Frank Page with an average 106.5 was high man and Eleanor Levy with 92.8 was high woman. The T. N. T.'s were the high team with 370.

Admiral P. B. Barrett of Army-Navy is cursing his luck. Playing with four others, his par three was high on the 170 yard twenty-second hole of the 27-hole layout. The other four, Capt. Tom Kurtz, Comdr. Will Hearn, Col. R. G. Rogers and Gen. W. C. James, all had birdie two's.

Every Friday is Ladies' Day at Congressional . . . Dave Dubb, a Woodmont golfer, takes a lot of good natured kidding about his name. He shoots in the mid 80's . . . Chips Cantor, who won the low gross at Woodmont's Opening Day Sweepstakes, excells in another sport, fencing. In 1937 he was national saber cheampion . . . Kenwood is holding its Annual Invitation Tournament May 15-18. Invitations have been sent to all member clubs in the Middle Atlantic area.

Indians Held To 3 Hits, Get 12 Walks

By Don Lief

Although Eastern hurlers Dan Cookman and Ken Atchison allowed 12 walks, they limited Anacostia to three hits yesterday as the Ramblers whipped the Indians, 8-4, at Anacostia, and clenched an Interhigh League playoff berth.

Stretching their Interhigh winning streak to six games, the Ramblers mustered eight hits off Anacostia's George Keough in the only league game of the day. Rain interrupted the contest in the sixth inning, when Eastern scored three insurance runs.

Priory JV's Triumph

Randall Tops Heurich, 9-6

A three-run triple by Bill Jones highlighted a 6-run Randall rally which overwhelmed defending champion Heurich, 9-6, in a Washington Post-Industrial League game on the West Ellipse.

Earlier, Jack Castro and Red Giegerich had helped boost the Brewers into a 5-3 lead with home runs. Brother Love, former Maryland pitcher, was the victim of Randall's uprising.

Civic Leaders Indorse Idea Of Combined Fund Drive

Committee Created To Study Means Of Cutting Number Of Charity Campaigns

By Richard L. Lyons
Post Reporter

A meeting of 10 area civic leaders yesterday created a committee to cut down the number of fund-raising drives conducted here.

Frank J. Luchs, who presided at the District Building meeting, said he will appoint the committee in a few days and hopes for action before the Community Chest's annual fall fund drive. The committee will report back recommendations to the larger group, he said.

Luchs said the committee will start with the assumption that the number of drives should be reduced and concentrate on how to do it. About 20 major appeals for funds are made in the Washington metropolitan area each year, he said.

Statements made at yesterday's meeting indorsed in principle the merging of all drives into one or two superdrives.

Miss Viola S. Schantz, speaking for the District Federation of Federal Employes, suggested two annual drives—one for the Community Chest and another for all national organizations. Similar suggestions came from other groups. Luchs himself suggested public sentiment might favor a separate drive for the American Red Cross.

1-Month Drive Urged

High officials of the Community Chest and District Chapter of the American Red Cross suggested holding all drives at the same time, but maintaining the identity of each organization.

Daniel W. Bell, campaign chairman of this year's Red Cross drive here, suggested that one month be set aside for all drives, and that one solicitation be made for all groups. Each contributor would allocate his contribution on the pledge card. And each card would list the various appeal groups and their annual budgets.

A proposal similar in principle was made by Chauncey G. Parker, president of the Community Chest Federation.

Edward F. Bartelt, Assistant Secretary of the Treasury and chairman of the Federal Government Division of the American Cancer Society, gave the other side of the picture.

Young Calls Meeting

The chief merit of a "super fund drive" would be in eliminating the annoyance of constant appeals, Bartelt wrote in a letter read at the meeting.

But he raised the question of whether a single drive would raise enough money. And he added that the individual drive "makes each cause stand on its own feet in the eyes of the public."

Yesterday's meeting had been called by Commissioner John Russell Young following complaints that private charities were suffering from the large number of drives. One of the loudest requests for a study of the problem had come from the Community Chest Federation on Luchs' motion. He was general campaign chairman of last year's Communist Chest fund drive.

Wife's Skull Fractured During Golf Lesson

A 19-year-old Arlington housewife was in critical condition with a fractured skull last night, accidentally struck by her husband who was showing her the proper way to tee off with a golf club.

Mrs. Norma M. Wilson of 2002 N. Kenmore st., was hit by the club swung by her husband, Henry, while he was demonstrating his golfing techniques in the front yard, Arlington Hospital authorities said.

Man, 70, Climbs Monument In 19 Minutes 34 Seconds

'WASN'T TIRED'—After walking up 898 steps to the top of the Monument and back down again in celebration of his seventieth birthday, George Frederick Miller of 11 Milmarson pl. nw., mounted his bike and pedaled back six miles home. After the climb, Miller said, "I wasn't at all tired . . . "

George Frederick Miller observed his seventieth birthday yesterday by walking up the Washington Monument and then back down.

"I wasn't at all tired," the former college professor said. "It didn't seem much more than going up the stairs at home. Of course, there were more of them."

Miller rode his bicycle from his home at 11 Milmarson pl. nw., six miles to the Monument and afterwards pedaled home.

The Monument climb of 898 steps took him 19 minutes 34 3/5 seconds by his stop watch.

"I could have made it in 15 minutes, but the photographers slowed me up," he said.

Miller, a teacher, was asked by reporters: "Do you have any bad habits, such as drinking or smoking?"

"Not those two," said Miller. "Name a few others."

Miller climbed the 555-foot Monument a week ago on a test run.

He has taught at Temple University, George Washington University, and other schools. For a time he was with the United States Bureau of Education.

Judge Invites Pleas to Drop Milk Case

Holtzoff Will Hear Acquittal Motions This Morning in Conspiracy Suit

Judge Alexander Holtzoff of District Court yesterday said he would entertain motions to acquit the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association and seven distributors, charged with a price-fixing conspiracy.

He made the statement after the Government rested at 3:30 p. m. in the prosecution which has lasted seven days.

As late as 11:45 a. m. of yesterday's session, the judge said he did not believe the Government had tied all of the defendants in the alleged conspiracy. He said he would hear the acquittal motions this morning.

Accused of Splitting Hairs

He said he would admit certain documents into evidence "only if the Government has made a prima-facie case of conspiracy—which it has not made yet."

Also, said the judge, the Government was engaging in "hair-splitting refinements" in testimony it presented in support of the indictment.

"This is a criminal case. You are not going to get a conviction on hair-splitting refinements," the judge said to Prosecutor Robert Winn.

However, the defense also came in for its share of comment from the judge, who is trying the case without a jury.

A witness, William B. Hooper, office manager of the producers' association, admitted his testimony varied somewhat from what he told the grand jury returning the indictment.

Explanation Unsatisfactory

Before the grand jury Hooper said that there was an oral understanding between the association and two dairies that the dairies would take milk through the association. On the witness stand, however, Hooper said there was no concrete agreement of any kind. Hooper explained that if he had been questioned fully before the grand jury, his previous testimony would not have conflicted with his present version.

To this, Judge Holtzoff said:

"I think candor requires that I should state that the court is not satisfied with the witness' explanation."

When documents were introduced showing the power of the association over the distributors, Judge Holtzoff said that while a conspiracy was not indicated by the evidence contained in the papers, the association appeared to hold a "club" over the distributors.

The local dairies on trial are Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy, Lucerne Milk Co., Thompson's Dairy, Harvey Dairy, Alexandria Dairy, Wakefield Dairy, and Richfield Dairy.

Takes Unescorted, Free Bus Ride

By Bob Burchette—The Washington Post

LOST AND FOUND—Blonde, blue-eyed 4-year-old Vicki Wimbish of 405 Quackenbos st. ne., boarded a bus near her home yesterday morning with a group of women and seated herself comfortably to enjoy her trip downtown. It wasn't until the bus had reached 11th and H sts. nw., that a passenger called the driver's attention to the young, unescorted passenger. A policeman escorted Vicki to the Woman's Bureau, where she was pictured having a fine time until her mother, Mrs. Jeanette Wimbish, arrived to take her home. Mrs. Wimbish had reported her child missing to the Sixth Precinct

House Sends 10% Cut in D. C. Funds To Senate

Last-Minute Move To Restore Original Sum Loses 179-104; Omnibus Bill Passed

The House voted 179 to 104 late yesterday to insist upon a 10 percent cut in next year's Federal payment to the District.

Representative Joe B. Bates (D., Ky.), lost out in a move to put the District funds cut to a roll-call vote.

When Bates asked for a roll call, only 35 members, about half the necessary number, joined in his request.

Representative John C. McCormack (D., Mass.), acting as Speaker, counted 319 members present. Rules state that a roll call cannot be granted unless one fifth of the members present demand it.

By yesterday's vote, the House fixed at $10,800,000 the amount of the Federal payment to the District for the year beginning July 1. Payment this fiscal year is 12 million dollars, the level which Congress fixed by statute in 1947.

The Federal payment to the District is part of the omnibus appropriation bill for Government activities, but the measure does not include the itemized District budget for the next fiscal year. That will be contained in a separate bill to come up in the House later.

Yesterday's vote reinforced an earlier House decision to cut the District payment. The standing vote was one of several tests that preceded final passage of the big Federal money bill. Passage of the bill came at 7:56 p. m. by a vote of 362 to 21, with two members voting present. The measure now goes to the Senate.

Representative John Taber, (R., N. Y.), ranking minority member of the House Appropriations Committee, sponsored the funds cut for the District. Representative Bates, who heads the Appropriations Subcommittee in charge of the District budget, fought Taber's move.

Taber won out 86 to 82, on April 19, on the original decision to cut the District funds. That vote was taken while the House was functioning as a committee of the whole. Yesterday's vote was taken by the House operating in regular session.

Republicans and a sprinkling of Democrats, mostly from Southern States, teamed up to defeat Bates' move to reverse Taber's victory. Only two Republicans joined with Bates in the standing vote by which Taber's motion finally carried. They were Representatives Lowell Stockman (Oreg.), a member of the Bates subcommittee on District appropriations, and Carroll Kearns (Pa.), member of the House District Committee.

House District Affairs leaders had predicted that if the House failed to restore the cut in the Federal payment, the Senate might do so. The Senate has frequently been favorable to larger appropriations for the District government than has the House.

Senator Lister Hill (D., Ala.), chairman of the Senate Subcommittee in charge of the District budget, declined yesterday to make any prediction about what the Senate might do on the question of the Federal payment.

"I'll see to it," he said, "that all the reasons for fixing the Federal payment at 12 million dollars are fully presented to the Senate."

A 12 million dollar payment was called for by the District Commissioners in recommending to Congress a city budget close to 120 million dollars for the next fiscal year.

Fair to Benefit Students

A "country fair" will be held at the Anacostia High School Friday from 5 to 10 p. m. under sponsorship of school clubs and the home school association to raise funds for student activities. Among highlights of the fair will be a play "Womanless Wedding," featuring men of the faculty.

Montgomery Parking Board Is Proposed

A former Montgomery County commissioner last night suggested establishment of a three-member Bethesda Parking Lot Authority to administer the county's proposed public off-street parking program.

Wesley I. Sauter, former commissioner and a member of the Montgomery County Real Estate Board, made the proposal at a public hearing on the off-street parking bill held by the County Council in Rockville.

Sauter outlined a board that would be composed of one representative from the County Council, Montgomery Chamber of Commerce, and County Real Estate Board.

Opposition to the parking bill last night was based on individual objections to specific portions of the measure.

Some suggested that merchants who provide half the parking space receive partial exemption from an assessment for the parking program.

To objections concerning council's selection of lots for the program, Council President Frederic P. Lee emphasized that the list of lots announced is merely tentative.

Library Department Urged in Montgomery

Establishment of a Department of Public Libraries for Montgomery County was asked in a bill introduced last night at a legislative session of the Montgomery County Council.

Introduced by Mrs. Dorothy Himstead, member of council from Chevy Chase, the bill would place the librarian of the county-wide system under the jurisdiction of the county manager. A library board of at least seven members would be established to serve without pay.

The bill also would repeal special levies for the Bethesda and Silver Spring libraries if they join the county system by June 30, 1951.

Mrs. Himstead said the bill was the unanimous result of a special County Council Committee set up to study the library plan.

Suit Dismissed

Mrs. Keleher Awaits Tests In Hospital

Gallinger Hospital officials yesterday awaited reports on diagnostic studies before taking action in the case of Mrs. Anna T. "Dolly" Keleher.

They were pleased to report that the former wife of the former gamblr John B. "Dapper Jack" Keleher was proving a "co-operative" patient after being brought to the hospital Tuesday night under rather uncooperative circumstances.

Dolly was evicted on a stretcher from her swank apartment at Woodley Park Towers for failure to pay her $162.90-a-month rent. She claimed she couldn't until Dapper Jack forked up $60,000 alimony, which he has appealed.

Meantime, yesterday District Judge Edward A. Tamm dismissed Dolly's $250,000 wrongful-eviction suit against the Ell and Kay Building and Investment Co., operators of Woodley Park Towers. The suit alleged a "partial eviction" October 18, 1949.

Gallinger officials said that if tests show her to be tubercular, she will be eligible for care either at Gallinger or Glenn Dale (Md.) Sanatorium.

But if the studies do not show a tuberculous condition, he indicated, Dolly will have to find housing elsewhere.

Stalled Elevator Traps Seven for 40 Minutes

A stalled elevator in the LaSalle Apartment Hotel, Connecticut ave. and L st. nw., trapped six passengers and the operator for more than 40 minutes early last night.

No panic nor injuries were reported by the group which became stuck between the second and first floors shortly after 5 p. m. A mechanic, dropping from the second floor to the elevator top, finally came to the rescue. By that time, several of the passengers were sitting on the floor.

Williams Head to Talk

Dr. James Phinney Baxter 3d, president of Williams College, will speak at the annual dinner of the Washington area alumni Thursday night at 6:30 p. m. in Hotel Statler. Officers will also be elected at that time.

Suffrage Unit Defers Action On Harris Bill

Trustees of the District Central Suffrage Conference last night referred to the group's home rule committee a "compromise" home rule bill introduced in the House Tuesday by Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.).

In a special meeting at 70 0Jackson pl. nw., the trustees declined to take an immediate stand on the Harris proposal after several members expressed fears it would impede efforts to discharge the Kefauver home rule bill from the House District Committee.

They voted to instruct the home rule committee to bring back a report on the measure as quickly as possible.

"Home rule" features of the Harris bill, which was referred to the House District Committee, would provide for an elected delegate from the District to sit in the House, and an elected board of education. It also would provide for reorganization of the executive officer, to be filled by the Commissioners.

During a discussion of the proposal Wilbur S. Finch, vice president of the conference, suggested the trustees support the bill because "it at least is a suffrage bill and could set up some election machinery in the District."

Thomas B. Scott opposed the measure on the ground that a debate on its merits might divert attention from he home rule discharge petition. Culver B. Champerlain, president of the conference, said he would be hesitant to indorse a bill that eliminates "many home rule features of the Kefauver bill."

When the discussion brought evidence of indecision, Jesse B. Manbeck, secretary, moved that the matter be referred to the committee. His motion was approved unanimously.

Chamberlain said he was not convinced the Kefauver bill was "by any means a dead duck," and urged the trustees to contact members of the Republican Policy Committee with a view of getting additional GOP support for the discharge petition.

The discharge petition, requiring 213 signatures to force the bill from the committee, had 189 this week but seven were found to be duplicates or had been withdrawn, Chamberlain reported.

USC to Open Local Nursing Home Study

A United Community Services' health committee shortly will launch a comprehensive study of all private nursing homes in the District, it was announced yesterday.

Isadore Seeman, UCS health section secretary, told its annual meeting the investigation undoubtedly will go into the question of licensing the homes.

Health Officer Daniel L. Seckinger has recently urged that nursing homes should be licensed to facilitate uniform enforcement of health standards.

Seeman stressed the study was not aimed solely at clamping down on the institutions. The chief purpose is to assure the best possible facilities for chronically ill persons, he said.

"We are concerned about the high rates, health standards and education aspects of these nursing homes," he said, adding preliminary conferences with home operators, health and hospital officials will begin this month.

The luncheon meeting at the Burlington Hotel also heard reports from UCS committee chairmen on new developments in the city's cancer, tuberculosis, heart home care, diabetes, arthritis, alcoholism and child health programs.

Mrs. Ella Oppenheimer, director of the Bureau of Maternal and Child Welfare Care, cited figures showing that the District's preschool population has soared 80 percent since 1940 and is still climbing.

"This fact is of tremendous significance," she said, "because we just haven't faced up to it." On the progress side she cited the soon-to-open Gales Child Health Center at 1st and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Operation of the center will afford the city its first central and coordinated maternity and child care center, she said.

Testimonial Slated For Jail Chaplain

A public testimonial for the Rev. James L. Pinn, a chaplain at the District Jail, will be held Friday on his 73d birthday.

For over two decades, the pastor of the Good Will Baptist Church has ministered to more than 10,000 men and women, and has walked with 32 persons to the electric chair. The program will begin at 8 p. m. at his church, 1519 U st. nw.

$2000 From Client

Jury Convicts D. C. Lawyer Of Swindle

Albert F. Graham, 43, a veteran attorney, was convicted yesterday by a District Court jury of swindling a client out of $2000.

The jury returned its verdict approximately two hours after receiving final instructions from Judge Jennings Bailey. The case had been in trial three days.

Graham who blanched when the jury foreman found him guilty of the two-count larceny indictment, was committed to jail without bail pending sentencing. Judge Bailey ordered that the probation office make a pre-sentence report on the case.

The complaining witness, Francisco Gal, 47, a Hungarian chef, said that he went to Graham for advice in January on a matter concerning naturalization. Gal said that he was seeking citizenship but feared that $25 he forfeited in a disorderly conduct case might stand in his way.

He quoted Graham as saying "money talks" and $2000 was necessary to pay the policeman in the case.

The policeman, Pvt. Louis T. Williams, acknowledged that he had arrested Gal in a "sex-type" case, but said that at no time did Graham ever offer him any money. On one occasion, Williams said, Graham invited him to his offices while Gal was in an outer room.

Graham denied that he ever suggested bribing the policeman. He said the $2000 was part of his legal fee in the naturalization matter.

Traffic Jams Snarl Old Highway Span

It was like old times at the old Highway Bridge last night. Rush hour traffic was stopped at the north approach on 14th st. back to C st. sw.

Two lanes in front of Jefferson Memorial were put out of commission by a surfacing project. At the south end of the bridge work has just started to widen the approaches to Route No. 1 from two lanes to three. The bridge itself was carrying four lanes of southbound traffic.

Samuel R. Harrison, deputy director of highways for the District, said work at the north end will be completed in a couple of days, and at the south end in a couple of weeks.

But then the old span is to be resurfaced, Harrison said. This will mean restricting bridge traffic to two lanes for several months, he said.

The new bridge was making up for the old last night. A 5 p. m. check showed the heavy traffic flow from Route 1 and the Pentagon moving smoothly across the new span and dispersing without tie-up on 14th st. and Maine ave.

Traffic officials said they would wait a few days for traffic patterns to settle before deciding whether any corrective measures are necessary.

Bandit Strikes At Cab Drivers Twice Nightly

The District has a clock-like bandit who has been striking hackers at a two-a-night clip since Saturday, police report.

In each case, the technique is identical. A cab is hailed in the 14th Precinct and robbed near the Maryland line. The lone bandit then dismisses the cab, runs into the woods, crosses the line and hires another cab which he robs on the return trip to 14th Precinct territory.

All victims agree upon a general description of the holdup man: a light-skinned Negro in his middle twenties, slim in build and about 5 feet 8 inches tall. He uses a black revolver, they report.

Last night, he pounced again, getting $9 from Cabbie James E. Reed, who drove him to the Maryland line. The Fourteenth Precinct was again on the prowl last night for his return. Robberies ranged from $3 to $9.

Former Parking Lot Operator Must Pay Rent—But No Lot

District Commissioners yesterday rented the city-owned parking lot at 6th st. and Indiana ave. nw. to a new tenant, but refused to release the former lessee from his contract.

The Commissioners took these actions, according to an order released by Geoffrey M. Thornett, secretary to the Board of Commissioners:

(1) Accepted the $80,313 bid of B & J Parking Service for the unexpired 19-month portion of a two-year lease held by Grand Plaza Parking Area, Inc.

(2) Stated that Grand Plaza, which had operated the lot until May 1, will be required to make up the difference between its rental and that paid by B & J Parking Service. This means Grand Plaza will be asked to pay $1025.52 a month for 19 months — without having a lot to operate.

Benjamin Wollberg, president of Grand Plaza, informed the Commissioners three weeks ago his firm would have to give up the lot because it was losing nearly $2000 a month. New bids were opened April 28, but because one was in error no action was taken until yesterday. B & J Parking Service had anticipated yesterday's action by starting operations May 1.

Trailer Dweller Found Guilty Of Living in Residential Zone

Mrs. Marian Barber, 45, was convicted yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court of living in a trailer in a residential zone.

The case was the first brought to court under a law passed by the Maryland General Assembly two years ago. The law says no person may live in a trailer at a single location for more than three days of any month—unless in a licensed trailer camp. Mrs. Barber's trailer is between Patton dr. and Miles st., Silver Spring.

Judge Stedman Prescott set her sentencing for May 18 at 9:30 a. m.

Maximum penalty is a $500 fine or 90 days in jail.

Dr. Ernest Q. King, 314 Garland ave., Takoma Park, Md., owner of the property on which the trailer stands, said he asked Mrs. Barber to move early in the year.

Mrs. Barber said she has lived there five years. She admitted being asked to move her trailer, but said she had no place to go.

At present, there are two temporarily licensed trailer parks in Montgomery County. One is filled and the other is unable to accept new tenants until the end of the month, according ot Allen Morton Thomas, jr., director of the department of inspections and licensing.

Alexandria Orders Cigarette Stamps

Alexandria officials yesterday placed an order for 5 million two-cent tax stamps as the first step in putting into effect a new cigarette levy by July 1.

The two-cent-per-pack tax was given approval by the City Council Tuesday night despite the opposition of two merchant groups and individual businessmen. Two of the seven councilmen opposed the tax ordinance.

Date of delivery of the stamps has not yet been determined, City Manager W. Guy Ancell said yesterday, but he expressed hope they would arrive "well in advance" of the effective date of the tax. They will be sold at the office of the city tax collector.

To compensate for the cost of affixing the stamps to cigarette packages, the ordinance provides for a 7 per cent discount on stamps sold in lots costing more than $1.

How the stamps will be affixed is a matter to be determined by wholesalers and retailers, Ancell said.

And whether the wholesaler will pay the tax, affix the stamps and pass the cost on to the retailer or sell the tax to the retailer tax-free "is up to them to decide," he added. He warned that a city license inspector will be detailed to make "spot checks" at all places selling cigarettes to ascertain if the ordinance is being obeyed.

Passage of the ordinance brought predictions that not only cigarette sales, but other forms of business would be hurt by the levy. The Alexandria Chamber of Commerce, in a resolution describing the tax as discriminatory, said it believed many residents would buy their cigarettes out of the city and would make other purchases at places where cigarettes are available at cheaper prices.

Joe McDonald, operator of a vending machine company, said the cigarette tax would force him out of business "if it weren't for the fact that I have other outlets beside Alexandria." A three-cent-per-pack profit now paid to merchants using his cigarette machines will have to be cut to one cent, he said, because "we've already absorbed as much taxation as we can stand."

City officials estimate the new tax will yield the city about $50,000 in the last half of the current year.

Wide Changes

Arlington School Jobs Shaken Up

Appointment of six new supervisors, two of them replacing supervisors transferred to other jobs, is provided in a sweeping redistribution of Arlington school personnel approved by the school board yesterday.

Besides transferring its existing elementary supervisors, the board approved a number of changes in school principals on the theory that diversified experience is helpful to the principals themselves. To meet the principals' request that they be relieved of teaching duties, it also was necessary to combine several of the smaller schools under single principalships, the board said.

The new supervisors will include three for elementary schools, instead of the present two, and one each for art, guidance and library. Four of the appointees are new to the school system.

Under changes affecting existing supervisors, Miss Margaret Ludwig will become principal of the McKinley and Charles Stewart elementary schools and Miss Anne Harrison will become a visiting teacher.

The new supervisors are Miss Wilda Woodruff, Miss Dicie Cassaday and Miss Sara Jane Clonts, elementary; Miss Kathryn Cook, guidance; Miss Evelyn Thornton, library, and Miss Willie May Ivey, art. The three elementary supervisors and Miss Ivey are all new to the Arlington school system.

The board also approved appointment of Edward Paulette, principal of the Dolly Madison Junior High School since it opened in 1945, as director of research for the scheel system.

In other action, it awarded a $164,461 contract for construction of an elementary school adjacent to the Hoffman-Boston High School to the Spradlin Construction Co. of Silver Spring.

These principal assignments were approved: Yorktown and Robert E. Lee schools, Herbert Shelly; John Marshall, Old Dominion and James Madison schools, Miss Grace Hall; Charles Stewart and the new McKinley schools, Miss Margaret Ludwig; Walter Reed School, Miss Elisabeth Coleman; Barcroft and Glencarlyn, David B. Davis; Thomas Nelson Page, Miss Gertrude Smith.

Maury School, Mrs. Elsie Ellis; Woodrow Wilson School, Miss Florence Gravette; Henry Clay School, Miss Dolly Smith; Nellie Custis School, Mrs. Meta Saffelle; Patrick Henry School, Mrs. Mae Van Meter; Kate Waller School, Raymond Rignall; Fairlington School, Logan C. Harding; Stonewall Jackson School, Miss Lillie Massoletti.

Abingdon School, Miss Mary Barbour; Peyton Randolph and George Pickett schools, Mrs. Marjorie Webber; the new Hume and Shirley Homes schools, Byron M. Cochran; James Monroe School, Miss Clara Coffman; Cherrydale, Woodlawn and Woodmont schools, Vaughn Duffield; Kemper School, Richard Moultrie; Langston School, Mrs. Elizabeth Hill; Hoffman-Boston School, S. M. Snyder; Thomas Jefferson High School, Clinton C. Cone; Claude Swanson Junior High School, Miss Lena Wolfe, and Stratford Junior High, Claude M. Richmond.

D. C. Scientist and Bride

AFTER MANY YEARS—Clinton Root Foutz, 74, of 3800 Porter st. nw., local inventor and scientist, and his bride, the former Mrs. Florence Goddess Piper, 69, who were married yesterday at the bride's Snell Island home near St. Petersburg, Fla. Childhood sweethearts in Baltimore, each married another and then met again early this year. They plan to spend their summers here and their winters in St. Petersburg

Vienna Farmer Shot to Death

A 65-year-old Vienna (Va.) farmer, Franklin Kidwell, was found shot to death at his home yesterday, Fairfax County police reported.

Kidwell, who had been in ill health recently, was discovered by Verlin Smith, also of Vienna, police said. A shotgun was found near his body.

Montgomery Police Await Pay Rise Answer

Members of the Montgomery County Police Department last night were told they will get a definite answer next Wednesday night from the county personnel board on their demand for a wage increase.

The policemen have asked that their salaries be raised to equal those of the Washington Metropolitan Police Department.

The Montgomery County Police Association meeting in Rockville was told that a personnel board recommendation on the salary question will be aired at Wednesday's meeting.

In the meantime, the association voted to ask County Police Chief Charles Orme to delay until July 1 enforcement of his order against outside employment for policemen. Chief Orme's order against the employment is now to be effective May 19.

Prince Georges Science Fair Set

The second annual Prince Georges County Science Fair, sponsored by the Science Teachers Association of Prince Georges County, will be held today and Friday in the Laurel High School gymnasium.

Pupils from all over the county have submitted exhibits for the fair. Fields of agriculture, medicine, plant research, chemistry, physics, mathematics, engineering, conservation, geology, physiology, meteorology and astronomy will be represented.

The fair is open to the public from 2 to 10 p. m.

Presbyterians Face Action On Changes

Richmond, Va., May 10 (AP).—Seventy-five proposals have been sent to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church, U. S., for action at its 90th annual session at Massanetta Springs, June 8-13.

The overtures were sent to the assembly by Southern Presbyterian synods and presbyteries.

Among the overtures is a request that the general assembly withdraw from the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America. Another asks that no plan of union with the Presbyterian Church, U. S. A. (Northern) be adopted.

One overture asks that the assembly request the President not to appoint a political representative to the Vatican to succeed Myron C. Taylor, who resigned early this year.

Four presbyteries asked the assembly to remove all color lines in presbyteries and synods and dissolve Snedecor Memorial Synod, which is composed of Negro churches.

Other proposals call for revisions in the wording or interpretation of church rules as set forth in the book of church order.

Arthur Johnson Elected President Of Lions Club

Johnson

A third-generation native of Washington, he has been a member of the Lions Club for 10 years and has served as either a director of vice president for several years.

Other officers elected are William J. Mileham, Otis H. Rittenour and Knut I. Nilsson, vice presidents; W. L. McDaniel, secretary; Vergne W. Potter, treasurer; Julius J. Radice, Lion tamer, and Douglas L. Zerkel, tail twister.

Chivalry Nets Man $25 Fine In 'Dime' Fight

Lad Gethers, 39, of 1233 8th st. nw., may not be the Marquis of Queensbury, but he still prefers not to hit a man wearing glasses.

In Municipal Court yesterday, he told Judge Thomas D. Quinn that on the night of May 2 he got mad at bespectacled Matthew Jackson, 35, of 936 N st. nw., outside a 9th street cafe. The subject of the dispute was one dime.

"You can't hit a man wearing glasses," Gethers told the judge. "So I took off his glasses with my right hand, and hit him with my left. Then I put his glasses down on the curb and hit him with my right."

"Twenty-five dollars or 30 days," the judge replied.

Col. England Dies; Former FTC Chief

Col. William H. England, 73, former chief of the Federal Trade Commission, died at Bethesda Naval Hospital where he had been a patient since October.

Col. England

A native of Edinburg, Ind., Col. England began his 40-year Federal career in 1908 as a special agent for the Bureau of Corporations. He was transferred to the FTC in 1915 when the office was organized.

He became chief economist in 1941, after serving 20 years as assistant chief economist.

Colonel England played a leading role in the commission's investigation of utility corporations from 1928 to 1935, and in the farm machinery investigation of 1928.

He holds a Ph.D. in economy from the University of Nebraska, and lived at 1344 Iris st. nw.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Norah England; two sons, William H., jr. and Collin B., and two granddaughters.

Funeral services will be held Friday at 2:30 p. m. at the Hines funeral home, 2901 14th st. nw. Burial will follow in Arlington Cemetery.

Albert Stup Dies; Lewistown Blacksmith

Frederick, Md., May 10 (Spl.)—Albert Clinton Stup, one of this county's few remaining blacksmiths, died unexpectedly yesterday at his Lewistown home at the age of 82 years. Mr. Stup started as a blacksmith's apprentice at the age of 16 and followed that trade, in addition to farming, for more than 60 years.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Alberta Cramer Stup; and a brother and sister, Joseph Stup and Mrs. John Hildebrand of Rocky Springs. Funeral services will be held Friday afternoon at Utica Reformed Church.

Juvenile Suspect Escapes Custody

Maryland State police were searching yesterday for a 16-year-old parolee from the Maryland Training School who escaped from a trooper shortly before midnight Tuesday at the Waterloo Barracks.

The youth was taken in custody near Laurel for questioning on suspicion of breaking and entering, police said. He broke away from the trooper as he was being removed from a police car to enter the barracks.

Mother's Day Fashions

CHARM CAMPAIGN FOR MOTHER'S DAY—and for every day in the year for that matter—can start with a truly becoming dress. This one, beautifully cut for the mature figure, is by a New York designer. It is fashioned of black crepe, frosted with lace. Camisole bodice, with straps, is banded with the lace, making the frock itself suitable for informal dinners and parties. With fitted bolero it becomes a costume suit for luncheon in town this summer

MOTHER-DAUGHTER FASHION — This spring, several designers of misses' clothes have made almost-identical duplicates scaled to the mature figure. Mother has, in part at least, won her fight to have clothes that are as fashion-right as those of her darling daughter. Here is an example, made of navy chiffon over a taffeta slip. Its 1950 style features include a slightly-bloused bodice and bow-tied, face-framing neckline, three-quarter-length sleeves and leather belt. Both costumes may be ordered through Woodward & Lothrop's

Card Party Will Benefit Episcopal Home

The Episcopal Church Home benefit card party will be held Friday, at 2 p. m. at the Shoreham Hotel. Mrs. Charles Hadley (Mi. 3254) is in charge of reservations. Punch and cookies will be served. Fancy work, cakes, candy and corsages will be sold.

Patrons and patronesses include the Bishop of Washington, the Right Rev. Angus Dun and Mrs. Dun, Mrs. William Channing Johnson, Coleman Jennings, Mrs. S. Percy Thompson, Mrs. Ernest F. Mechlin, Mrs. James H. Turner, Miss Anne B. Moore, Mrs. John Sevier, Mrs. Norris E. Marlow, Mrs. T. Nelson Conrad, Miss Lucy Hammett, Mrs. Roger M. Stuart, Mrs. William R. Myers, Mrs. Rupert J. Mohler, jr.; Mrs. William R. Castle, Miss Frances M. Smith, Mrs. Ralph Sabin, Mrs. Edward Clifford, Mrs. Avery Coonley, Mrs. Paul E. Johnson, Miss Emily C. Matthews, Mrs. W. W. Boyd, Mrs. David N. Craig, Mrs. J. L. Houghteling, Mrs. E. S. Phillips, Mrs. Edward B. Meigs, Mrs. Charles V. Wayland, Mrs. William W. Wrightson, Mrs. Buchanan Merryman,

The home is open to women and aged couples of the Episcopal Church in the Diocese of Washington between the ages of 65 and 75. The home is operated by a board of governors headed by Bishop Dun of Washington and a board of lady managers, made up of committees from the Episcopal Churches of the Diocese. Located at Wisconsin ave. and Macomb st., the home is now occupied by 31 women.

Terribly in Love, Girl Is Shattered When Her Beau Is Obliged to Marry Someone Else; Tries Fast Pace to Ease Pain, But It Palls

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 19 years old, attractive and popular with boys and girls. However, I am not happy. About two years ago Ted, with whom I had gone steady for years, had to marry another girl. I was rather heartbroken, for I was terribly in love with him.

We had been called "The Inseparables" because we went everywhere together, to school, church, picnics, etc., so I had no close girl friends. Then after he married I met several girls, from nice homes like mine, but they ran with a fast crowd, and to keep up with them I learned to smoke and drink.

No one compelled me to go to night clubs but I went along and began to act sophisticated, too. I was introduced to this person and that, and soon began having many dates. I learned to make witty and sarcastic remarks and became the life of every party. Having got the habit of being sarcastic and cold-hearted, it seems I can't change. But I want to change. I am tired of playing the sophisticate. I want to be just plain Annie.

I was rather fond of one man I met, but it lasted only three months. To tell the truth I wasn't fair to him, but I wouldn't admit it and ended up saying the wrong things. I went out with several others while going steady with him. Anyway he wanted to reform me from drinking, smoking and going to night clubs and I wouldn't listen. So that ended that.

I stopped going out, began wearing flat heels and little or no make-up for several months. I became the average teen-ager and what happened? No dates, not even a telephone call. They thought I was sick or maybe crazy. But I don't want to continue constantly on the go, dating different boys. I just want to settle down and be happy with one man. But it seems I've waited too long to change.

When I see a young married couple with a child it nearly breaks my heart. I am so miserable. At times I think no one, not even my parents, care for me; but I know they do. They try to make me happy. They give me what I want and try to make me comfortable, but I say the wrong things to them, too, as I do to everyone I love. Can you help me?

A. B.

Rejection Shock Starts Neurosis

DEAR A. B.: You are still suffering from the shock of losing Ted to another girl for cause that proved he was unfaithful to you at a time when you loved and trusted him wholeheartedly.

Your first reaction to the blow was to pull yourself together, keep your chin up and hide your hurt; but simultaneously you became neurotic, in the sense of developing a fear of heartbreak so intense that unconsciously you resolved to become unfeeling if possible, to insulate yourself against emotional attachments and risks of rejection in future.

Also I gather you figured a fast girl stole your beloved, so still in a daze you decided to try that pace, too; and both to ventilate your new bitter distrust of men, and keep them at arm's length so you wouldn't begin to care, you hit on a witty sarcastic "life-of-the-party" line. However, this wasn't exactly a planned performance, but rather compulsive—a headlong flight from crying desolation of spirit that you felt would be unbearable if fully faced in steady silence.

Now you are rocking back to your senses, it seems; but your self esteem is still pretty groggy, and that is why you lack conviction that people love you, even when you know they do. The fact that Ted played you false after taking up your time for years is a reflection on his character, not an indictment of your qualities, as you anxiously construe.

Due to the jolt you've built up a notion that you don't merit love or can't win and hold a man's devotion. But I daresay the real significance of Ted's two-timing is that he has an unstable streak and will be unfaithful to women through life. Thus I advise you to stop downgrading yourself because of his unreliable conduct, and let your feelings burgeon normally again, unhindered by neurotic fears and defenses.

Prints, Pistols Tell Story Of U. S. Navy

By Elizabeth Maguire

The Truxtun-Decatur Naval Museum will have a gala opening on Wednesday, May 17, from 4:30 to 6:30 p. m. Yesterday the press had a preview of this gem-like museum.

The story of the Navy is told in rare, old prints, in ship models and glass cabinets filled with models of guns, in spy glasses, boarding pikes, pistols, and such navigational instruments as old quadrants, scales and compasses.

The Naval Historical Foundation amassed this interesting collection and found a suitable home for it in the building attached to historic Decatur House, home of Mrs. Truxtun Beale. The museum bears the names of two commodores who made naval history from the time of the Revolution through the War of 1812.

Decatur House was built by Benjamin Latrobe for Commodore Stephen Decatur in 1819, with prize money he had won in the wars with the Barbary pirates. In later years the house fell into the hands of Edward Fitzgerald Beale, grandson of Commodore Thomas Truxtun, one of the country's first naval officers.

There will be a series of three or four exhibits at the museum throughout the year. The present one, ranging from the time of the Revolution through the war of 1812, will remain until October. The exhibit starts with a model of the first ship out of Philadelphia in the China trade of 1786. Called the Canton, the ship's master was Thomas Truxton.

Officers of the foundation are Fleet Admiral William D. Leahy, president; Commodore Dudley W. Knox, vice president; Capt. Archibald D. Turnbull, secretary; Admiral Arthur S. Carpenter, chairman, museum committee. Lieut. Comdr. Edward M. Davis 3d is director of the museum, and Lieut. Comdr. Robert M. Lunny is associate director.

The museum will open to the public at noon Thursday, May 18. Admission is free at all times. Tuesdays to Fridays the museum is open 12 noon to 5:30 p. m.; Saturdays, 10:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.; Sundays, 2:30 p. m. to 5:30 p. m. It is closed on Mondays.

Value of Hospital Volunteers Stressed

The importance of women's auxiliaries to area hospitals was stressed at the conference yesterday in Annapolis, Md., of the Maryland-District of Columbia-Delaware Hospital Association.

Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of the Women's Board of George Washington University Hospital, described the new quarterly magazine, The Courier, published by the board.

Mrs. Chauncey G. Parker, president of the Women's Board of the Central Dispensary and Emergency Hospital, spoke about gift shops as good money-raisers.

The role of fashion shows as fund raisers was discussed by Mrs. J. Raymond Raedy, president of the Women's Board of Providence Hospital.

Mrs. C. W. Schott New Air Force Wives' President

Mrs. Charles Wesley Schott was elected president of the Air Force Officers' Wives' Club yesterday at the picnic luncheon at Andrews Base.

Mrs. Schott, a colonel's wife, succeeds Mrs. Merrill D. Burnside.

Other new officers of the group include Mrs. W. G. Booth, first vice president; Mrs. E. W. Wigman, second vice president; Mrs. William J. Lookadoo, recording secretary; Mrs. M. J. Asensio, corresponding secretary; Mrs. T. S. Ryan, treasurer, and Mrs. Milford Itz, assistant treasurer.

Mrs. Lawrence Kuter was chairman of the meeting, the last of the season, which took place on the terrace outside the Officers' Club at the base.

Not New But Still Stylish

At a fashionable gathering at the Army-Navy Country Club yesterday an admiral's daughter presented a showing of second hand clothes. Yes, second hand clothes.

Miss Florence King, whose father is Fleet Admiral Ernest King, staged a style show of clothing from her "Not New" shop in Alexandria, Va.

Miss King, and her partner, Mrs. Henri Erhsam, are commission agents who take in outgrown clothing or "foolish mistakes" and sell them again. They specialize in exclusive designs their patrons outgrew or tired of after a few wearings.

Half a dozen Navy wives modeled the styles, which included originals from several leading designers.

Everybody—Well, Almost—Attended This Big Do

By Marie McNair

MR. AND MRS. SIDNEY GRAVES' friends extend into the deepest roots of social Washington. And the Graves' annual garden party is the one time you'll see them all.

For a few brief moments yesterday afternoon it looked as though the several hundred guests would have to be herded indoors at the Graves' rambling house on Foxhall rd. A brief shower preceded the arrival of the first guest by 10 minutes. In another 10 minutes the skies were bright; the bar was set out under the trees with a buffet on the terrace, and the party was on.

Mr. and Mrs. Graves stayed indoors, the hostess welcoming the guests in a dark blue crepe gown with gardenias pinned to her shoulder. Cars lined the road for almost a mile; filled up Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz' winding driveway next door; and chauffeurs even took advantage of the Belgian Embassy's parking space across the way.

Some, like Mrs. James Lawrence Houghteling, came early and were homeward bound by 6 p. m. Others came and stayed, enjoying the dogwod still in bloom.

Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, wife of the Norwegian Ambassador, was sipping a glass of champagne, after she did her stint at the tea table. Senora de Dillon, wife of the Ecuador Ambassador, also poured tea, and the New Zealand Ambassador, Sir Carl Berendsen, who had left Lady Berendsen at the coffee urn, was searching everywhere for her when it was time to go home.

Freida Utley talking earnestly to a companion, Mrs. Hamilton Fish; Gen. Thomas Hanley; Gen. and Mrs. John Greeley, Mrs. Greely with pink roses on her hat; Frank Hanighen strolling on the lawn with Mrs. Homer Ferguson; Mrs. Virgil Petersen in dotted gunmetal gray; Clarence Hewes; Mrs. Harold Walker, and former Ambassador and Mrs. Stanley Hornbeck were among those enjoying the party. Over shoulders and under hats, I saw Mrs. George Barnett talking to Dr. Walter Wells, Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, the William Culbertsons, Bernard Gallagher with his Mrs. in a black frock and pink flower halo hat. Senora de Berckemeyer, wife of the Peruvian Ambassador, and the Royce Powells.

In fact, I saw practically everyone I had ever known or heard of—except President Truman and Perle Mesta!

Mrs. Robert Whitney Imbrie will go to New York on Friday for the twenty-seventh annual reunion of "The Neareasters," members of Near East Relief who worked together following World War I. She will be back in Washington in a week or 10 days.

Mrs. Perle Mesta, United States Minister to Luxembourg, was honored last evening at a dinner given by Mrs. Alexander Day Surles in her apartment at the Kennedy Warren.

MR. AND MRS. M. RAJENDRA, who are visiting here from Ceylon, were entertained at a dinner last evening at the Shoreham by the Second Secretary of the Embassy, G. S. Peiris. Ranking guests were the Ambassador of Ceylon and Mrs. Corea. Others included Mr. and Mrs. Serge Rips, the Counselor of the embassy and Mrs. Gunaratna, and Tissa Wickremasinghe, an official of Ceylon also visiting here.

During their stay in Washington, Mr. and Mrs. Rajendra are the guests of the Ambassador and Mme. Corea.

MRS. FRANK PACE, wife of the Secretary of the Army, was the guest in whose honor Mrs. Roy North, wife of the Postmaster of Washington, entertained at luncheon yesterday in the Palladian Room of the Shoreham.

Mrs. Fred Vinson, wife of the Chief Justice, was ranking guest.

COMMANDER AND MRS. JOHN P. MARTIN entertained at cocktails yesterday at Harry Lee Hall in Quantico, Va., where Commander Martin is stationed.

Mrs. Martin's mother, Mrs. James H. Hughes, wife of former Senator Hughes of Delaware, is visiting her son-in-law and daughter. Mrs. Hughes, who is Democratic National Committeewoman from Delaware, will attend the Democratic Conference in Chicago.

Gov. Lane's Daughter Will Wed June 3

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 10 (AP). Jean Cartwright Lane will be married on Saturday, June 3, at 4:30 p. m. in historic St. Anne's Episcopal Church of Annapolis.

Gov. William Preston Lane, jr., and Mrs. Lane announced the arrangements today.

Miss Lane, their younger daughter, a 1949 Vassar graduate, will wed Stanhope Scott Goddard, jr., of Noroton, Conn., a New York investment broker and 1942 Yale graduate.

The Right Rev. Noble C. Powell, Bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Maryland, will perform the ceremony, assisted by the Rev. C. Edward Berger, thirty-ninth rector of St. Anne's since the parish was founded in 1692.

Local historians believe it will be the first wedding of a Governor's daughter in the State capital since colonial days. The tall-spired red brick church in the center of old Annapolis seats 715 persons. After the wedding, there will be a reception at the mansion across the street.

"While the invitations to the ceremony will be limited due to the seating capacity of the church, the invitation list to the reception includes personal friends of the bride and groom and their families, and public officials," the announcement said.

Dorothy Lane, sister of the bride, will be maid of honor. Best man will be Wilmer Scott of New York, brother-in-law of the groom.

Miss Lane is the granddaughter of Mrs. Lewis T. Byron and the late Mr. Byron and of the late Col. and Mrs. William Preston Lane of Hagerstown. She was graduated from Westover School and Vassar College.

Goddard served as a Navy flight operations officer in the Pacific and is associated with the New York firm of Abbott, Proctor & Paine, investment brokers.

The Junior Women's Club of College Park recently elected the following officers: President, Mrs. Glenn Hoffman; vice president, Mrs. C. Wilbur Cissell; recording secretary, Mrs. Thomas Mont; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Walter Brown, and treasurer, Mrs. Earl Miller.

The next meeting will be held at 8 o'clock at St. Andrews Parish Hall.

Who's This Guy Middleground? Turtles Wonder

Turtles who weigh in at 7 pounds or under are eligible for the fifth annual Northern Virginia Sweepstakes for Turtles, which will open the Seminary Fair at Seminary Hill, Alexandria, Va., Saturday.

In addition there will be pony rides for the children, a real toy train, a pet show, puppet show and fortune-teller. For grown-ups, there will be a fashion show presented by John Simon of Shirlington. The fair opens at 1:30 p. m.

Another feature of the day will be an animal show. Prizes will be given to the hairiest animal, the handsomest pet, the most colorful, the smallest, the most unusual, and the one with the longest tail.

Early entries indicate that the Young People's Service League, sponsoring the show at the fair, will have to judge goats, rabbits, a hamster or two, pet kittens and cats, chickens, pigeons, but so far no skunks. Dogs will not be welcome this year, the committee rules, because they bark and chase cats.

Entries will be accepted up to 1 p. m. on Saturday. Pets must be brought in a basket, box, a crate, or on a leash. An exhibitor must accompany each entry.

The fair is sponsored by the Woman's Auxiliary of Immanuel-Church-on-the-Hill, Alexandria.

St. Thomas Flower Show May 13

The Parish House of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church will be a riot of color as the hall is transformed into a garden for the flower show to be held Saturday.

Mrs. John G. Harlan of Bethesda heads the list of judges who will award ribbons for the most attractive and original flower arrangements. Designs in table settings, featuring Italian pottery and French glassware, will be one of the features of the show. The opening is scheduled for 3 p.m.

Last-minute shoppers for Mother's Day gifts will find a solution to their problems at the corsage booth and at the candy table, where there will be gift-wrapped homemade candy.

Mrs. Rufus M. Roll is chairman.

When Kettle Whistles, Better Heed Its Music; A Watched Pot Never Boils Dry or Needs Patching

DEAR ANNE:

I carelessly left the stove on under my aluminum whistling tea-kettle when it was dry, and now it leaks around the bottom seam. I should appreciate very much your suggestions about how to have it mended. L. P. R., Oak Grove, Va.

Some of the tinning and stove repairing firms in Washington will do such small repair jobs for customers, more or less as a favor. However, they say it's usually cheaper to buy a new utensil in view of the time that must be spent on it and labor costs. Mending is advisable only in the case of very large or expensive utensils.

For instance, one firm figures it would cost from $3 to $5 to repair your whistling tea kettle. If you are anxious to have it fixed, regardless of cost, you can find these firms listed in the Washington classified telephone directory.

DEAR ANNE:

I have accumulated a great deal of foreign-made jewelry, most of it quite interesting but not very valuable. Much of it needs repair and the cost of having it done is prohibitive. Are there any kits one can buy for home repair of jewelry? Is there any practical solder for repairing broken pieces at home? How can foreign coins be made into jewelry? I. B. C.

With the proper tools and some technical advice on how to use them, there's no reason why you couldn't repair some of your interesting jewelry at home. To some folks, the jeweler's craft is an absorbing hobby; perhaps it will become yours.

Although you may be able to buy a ready-assembled kit of equipment, the chances are any such collection would fall short of your needs, since the items to be repaired are so varied. It might be better for you to decide first what pieces you want to work on, and then consult a jeweler's supply house as to what specific tools each of these jobs will need. One such firm in Washington, which is willing to advise amateurs and hobbyists, can be reached at Metropolitan 0909. In addition to telling you precisely what equipment your particular project will require, this firm will show you books on procedures. You can buy solder, and also other types of adhesive designed for jeweler's work.

Foreign coins can be made into very striking jewelry. The easiest way, perhaps, is to string coins matched or balanced in size on a gold or silver chain of necklace or bracelet length. This is done by boring small holes at the top of each coin, and linking them to the chain with tiny metal loops. Silver chains of various thickness can be purchased by the foot or yard. You will want a fairly sturdy chain to bear the weight of many coins.

If some of your coins are of copper or other base metal, you can have them silver or gold plated to avoid the unpleasant dark smudge which those metals leave on the skin. Or, you can bring them to a high polish with cleanser, and then coat them with clear lacquer.

Coins can also be attached to a plain bar pin, making an effective lapel ornament.

DEAR ANNE:

We have a drain board on our sink that is bare wood and it has gotten very stained and ugly-looking. I scrub it regularly but haven't been able to improve it much and can't afford a new one. How can I get off these spots and keep it better in the future? C. J. R., Leesburg.

You can bleach out the soiled drain board with a saturated solution of oxalic acid. This is made by dissolving about a cup of the crystals in ½ gallon of hot water, more crystals then being added as long as the water will dissolve them.

DEAR ANNE:

I find sterlizing baby bottles a terrible chore and wonder if there is any solution in which they can be soaked so as to eliminate this step. W. K. L., Washington.

To get baby bottles really sterile—and, of course, that's very important with an infant,—it is necessary to follow the prescribed heat sterilization process. This becomes much less of a task with practice. However, heres' an idea: Have you tried the new plastic collapsible baby bottles? These are sold in long strips to be cut apart and are sterile when they come to you. When you have used them once, they are thrown away—not as lavish a procedure as it may sound since they are not expensive.

PETUNIA!

I found a magic shortcut
And my ecstasy is utter.
I'll never use a cup again
To measure lard or butter!

Good idea, Petunia! It saves cup-washing to weigh instead of measure. 1 cupful equals ½ pound, ½ cupful equals ¼ pound, and so forth.

Balanced Diet Lets You Reduce Without Wrinkles

(This is the ninth in a series of articles on keeping young.)

By Ida Jean Kain

TWENTY-FIVE years or so ago, reducing got the reputation of being frightfully aging, and risky business. It was indeed. Women hastened to ruin their health on lopsided diets. The strain told.

Today reducing has gone scientific, and it's overweight that has the aging reputation. Still many women are actually afraid to take off unhealthy fat for fear it will make them look older.

If you are interested in a plan that will let you reduce without a wrinkle, and look and feel years younger, here it is:

Aim at healthy normal weight for your individual build; plan to lose between one and two pounds a week on a diet abundant in all the keeping-young nutrients, and add a little exercise for good measure. That program is a tonic.

Wrinkles come from strain. Fatigue makes anyone appear older, regardless of weight. But the science of nutrition makes it possible to be on the best diet in the world, and have more energy while losing weight.

JOE STAFFORD slimmed off 40 pounds and feels wonderful. She's on the sunny side of 29, and looks even younger with less weight

To replace fat with firm muscle tissue, take a little daily exercise. Walking in the fresh air tones the skin and stirs up circulation. Two or 3 miles a day bring beautiful results.

And here's the pattern for eating to reduce and look younger.

FOODS	CALORIES
Citrus fruits or juice	75
2 other fruits	175
1 green or yellow vegetable	40
2 other vegetables	100
Skim milk or buttermilk, 2 glasses	160
Or 1 glass plus ounce of cheese
Lean meat or fish, 4 to 6 ounces	200- 250
1 or 2 eggs	75- 150
3 thin slices 100% whole grain or enriched bread	150
Butter, 3 one-half pats	75
1 vitamin concentrate	0
Plenty of water during the day
Total calories for day	1050 1175

Not Much Fat Stored in Face

WHAT about that "reduced look" that can come from losing fat in the face, you may ask? Actually there is comparatively little fat stored in the face, so you can't lose much there. The reduced look comes from strain, not from lost weight. That brings us back to good nutrition again. Perhaps you know the list of protective essentials, but check to make certain you get them daily: skim milk, buttermilk or whole milk, lean meat, eggs, fruits, vegetables, wholegrain or enriched bread or cereal . . . supplemented by a vitamin concentrate for prolonged dieting.

Too-rapid reducing is frowned on for many reasons, including physiological strain. A good diet fixes that, for it takes a minimum of 1000 calories daily to cover the essential nutrients.

Skin plays the beauty role in reducing. The skin expands with weight gain and must shrink when weight is reduced. Anyone who has carried a considerable amount of excess weight for years should lose more slowly—1 pound a week.

Beauty Creams So Much Velvet

WHAT about beauty creams, lotions and astringents? They are so much "velvet," and used in connection with a perfect diet and a bit of toning exercise, ward off wrinkles. Use them!

Rice to Head Underwriters Group in D. C.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Charles P. Rice is slated to become president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at the luncheon meeting today in the Shoreham Hotel. He will succeed William J. McCausland of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Rice

Rice, Washington manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., is presently serving as first vice president of the group. He has been associated with Mutual Life since 1929 and manager here since January 1, 1947. He was prominent in athletics at the University of Tennessee and played professional baseball for two years.

Other officers to be elected today include Chester R. Jones, general agent of State Mutual, first vice president, and Joseph S. Baldwin, special agent of Northwestern Mutual, second vice president.

Three directors will also be elected. Originally scheduled for another hotel, today's luncheon meeting will be at the Shoreham.

SPLITUP VOTED: Stockholders of Washington Loan & Trust Co. approved a 10-for-1 splitup of capital stock at a special meeting yesterday. Effective June 15, the 10,000 shares of $100-par stock will be changed to 100,000 shares of $10-par shares. More than 80 percent of the outstanding shares were represented at the vote. It was anticipated that the new stock will carry a $1.40 annual dividend rate, the equivalent of the present $14 a share rate.

AIB ELECTION: Samuel C. Redman, jr., assistant cashier of the Lincoln National Bank, was elected president of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at the meeting Tuesday night. Two other nominees, also unopposed, were elected—Ralph H. Mittendorff, American Security & Trust Co., first vice president; Lloyd S. Carey, Suburban National Bank, second vice president. In contested votes William H. Smith, Riggs National Bank, was elected treasurer; Geraldine Huffman, National Capital Bank, secretary; Martha B. Reardon, Citizens Bank of Takoma Park, assistant secretary; Wilmer J. Waller, jr., Hamilton National Bank, chief consul. Elected to the board of governors were: Walter J. Clements, Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co.; Helen T. Dwyer, Liberty National Bank; John R. Graff, Suburban National Bank, and Allen A. Greenstreet, National Savings & Trust Co.

DEFICIT CUT: Trans World Airline reported a deficit of $1,844,049 for the first three months, compared with a net loss of $3,013,020 in same 1949 period. The first quarter is the tradition low period for eastwest airlines.

ODD LOTS: Potomac Electric Power "rights" on a when-issued basis were traded yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange. After a sale of 250 warrants at 12¼ cents each, the bid price moved up to 12½ cents with no listed offerings. It takes five "rights" to buy one Pepco share at $14.50 . . . Auditors Section of D. C. Bankers Association will meet tonight in the Burlington Hotel . . . Public offering of 100,000 shares of Knott Hotels Corp. at $12.50 a share was quickly oversubscribed . . . Price of lead moved up one-quarter cent a pound to 11½ cents, New York basis . . . Ralph S. Damon, TWA president, warned yesterday that rate-cutting competition may kill the newly-developed air coach services.

ELECTION: The Chesapeake Chapter of the Robert Morris Associates elected Henry J. Meyer of Baltimore as president at the annual meeting Tuesday in Baltimore. The bank credit group also elected R. Perry Yeatman, Washington, first vice president; Christopher A. Rupp, Baltimore, second vice president; Thomas E. Whinerey, Washington, secretary-treasurer. Named to board of governors were Paul J. Seltzer, Washington, and John W. Crouch, Towson.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Ernest K. Lindley, columnist, will address the Washington Society of Massachusetts Institute of Technology at a dinner meeting tonight in the Willard Hotel. John A. Bard, educational director of Washington chapter, addressed the local Society of Women Accountants yesterday in the Willard . . . John P. Sheridan, former naval officer, has been named Washington engineering representative of Sprague Electric Co. . . . H. G. Horstman has been appointed director of sales and customer relations for Texas Gas Transmission Corp. . . . Joseph F. Matthai of Baltimore has been elected president of the Association of Casualty and Surety companies.

EARNINGS: Philco Corp. reported record net income of $4,074,000 or $2.37 a share for the first quarter, compared with $915,000 or 49 cents a share in the same 1949 period. Sales for the first three months totaled $79,487,000, compared with $53,006,000 last year. Other earnings statements on a per share basis follow:

Rice to Head Underwriters Group in D. C.

By S. Oliver Goodman

Charles P. Rice is slated to become president of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at the luncheon meeting today in the Shoreham Hotel. He will succeed William J. McCausland of Acacia Mutual Life Insurance Co.

Rice

Rice, Washington manager of the Mutual Life Insurance Co., is presently serving as first vice president of the group. He has been associated with Mutual Life since 1929 and manager here since January 1, 1947. He was prominent in athletics at the University of Tennessee and played professional baseball for two years.

Other officers to be elected today include Chester R. Jones, general agent of State Mutual, first vice president, and Joseph S. Baldwin, special agent of Northwestern Mutual, second vice president.

Three directors will also be elected. Originally scheduled for another hotel, today's luncheon meeting will be at the Shoreham.

SPLITUP VOTED: Stockholders of Washington Loan & Trust Co. approved a 10-for-1 splitup of capital stock at a special meeting yesterday. Effective June 15, the 10,000 shares of $100-par stock will be changed to 100,000 shares of $10-par shares. More than 80 percent of the outstanding shares were represented at the vote. It was anticipated that the new stock will carry a $1.40 annual dividend rate, the equivalent of the present $14 a share rate.

AIB ELECTION: Samuel C. Redman, jr., assistant cashier of the Lincoln National Bank, was elected president of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking, at the meeting Tuesday night. Two other nominees, also unopposed, were elected—Ralph H. Mittendorff, American Security & Trust Co., first vice president; Lloyd S. Carey, Suburban National Bank, second vice president. In contested votes William H. Smith, Riggs National Bank, was elected treasurer; Geraldine Huffman, National Capital Bank, secretary; Martha B. Reardon, Citizens Bank of Takoma Park, assistant secretary; Wilmer J. Waller, jr., Hamilton National Bank, chief consul. Elected to the board of governors were: Walter J. Clements, Prince Georges Bank & Trust Co.; Helen T. Dwyer, Liberty National Bank; John R. Graff, Suburban National Bank, and Allen A. Greenstreet, National Savings & Trust Co.

DEFICIT CUT: Trans World Airline reported a deficit of $1,844,049 for the first three months, compared with a net loss of $3,013,020 in same 1949 period. The first quarter is the tradition low period for east-west airlines.

ODD LOTS: Potomac Electric Power "rights" on a when-issued basis were traded yesterday on the Washington Stock Exchange. After a sale of 250 warrants at 12½ cents each, the bid price moved up to 12½ cents with no listed offerings. It takes five "rights" to buy one Pepco share at $14.50 . . . Auditors Section of D. C. Bankers Association will meet tonight in the Burlington Hotel . . . Public offering of 100,000 shares of Knott Hotels Corp. at $12.50 a share was quickly oversubscribed . . . Price of lead moved up one-quarter cent a pound to 11½ cents, New York basis . . . Ralph S. Damon, TWA president, warned yesterday that rate-cutting competition may kill the newly-developed air coach services.

ELECTION: The Chesapeake Chapter of the Robert Morris Associates elected Henry J. Meyer of Baltimore as president at the annual meeting Tuesday in Baltimore. The bank credit group also elected R. Perry Yeatman, Washington, first vice president; Christopher A. Rupp, Baltimore, second vice president; Thomas E. Whinerey, Washington, secretary-treasurer. Named to board of governors were Paul J. Seltzer, Washington, and John W. Crouch, Towson.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Ernest K. Lindley, columnist, will address the Washington Society of Massachusetts Institute of Technology at a dinner meeting tonight in the Willard Hotel. John A. Bard, educational director of Washington chapter, addressed the local Society of Women Accountants yesterday in the Willard . . . John P. Sheridan, former naval officer, has been named Washington engineering representative of Sprague Electric Co. . . . H. G. Horstman has been appointed director of sales and customer relations for Texas Gas Transmission Corp. . . . Joseph F. Matthai of Baltimore has been elected president of the Association of Casualty and Surety companies.

EARNINGS: Philco Corp. reported record net income of $4,074,000 or $2.37 a share for the first quarter, compared with $915,000 or 49 cents a share in the same 1949 period. Sales for the first three months totaled $79,487,000, compared with $53,006,000 last year. Other earnings statements on a per share basis follow:

CAA Sees Airport Needs At 5093 Sites

A 1950 Civil Aeronautics Administration plan listing 5093 locations where airports should be constructed or improved was made public yesterday by CAA Administrator D. W. Rentzel.

The listing includes 31 locations in Virginia and 28 in Maryland. Although no recommended projects are located in the District itself, the Virginia list includes a Washington international airport, for which no site has been selected.

In connection with the international airport, a site near Annandale has been most frequently mentioned. It has been approved by the National Capital Park and Planning Commission.

In the nearby Virginia area the plan also suggests new airports at Charlottesville, Fredericksburg, Harrisonburg and Woodstock. It calls for improvements to facilities at Leesburg, Manassas, Orange, Staunton and Winchester.

Proposed new airports in nearby Maryland would be located at Annapolis, College Park and La Plata. The plan suggests improvements to airports at Frederick, Hagerstown, Westminster and Cumberland.

The listing, based on existing and anticipated demands for air service during the next three years, does not mean funds will be assured, according to Rentzel. He said, however, that on the basis of appropriations to be made by Congress, the CAA will include in its coming fiscal year program the locations that show the greatest need.

Cost of the complete program, according to the plan, would be $928,033,000. Of the total, $445,688,000 would be in Federal funds, the remainder in sponsor funds.

Judge Tables Penalty in Case Of Realtor

William L. Lebling, 53, prominent Washington and Bethesda realtor, pleaded guilty yesterday in Montgomery County Circuit Court to misappropriating about $8000 from a client. His sentence was "generally suspended."

Lebling

Under a "generally suspended" sentence, Lebling, who lives in Dickerson, Md., is on his "good behavior" for the rest of his life, court officials said. He may be brought back for sentencing at any time.

Lebling, former president of the Bethesda Chamber of Commerce, faced charges of failing to apply against deed of trust about $8000 given him for that purpose by Joseph A. Keenan, jr., 406 Rosemary st., Chevy Chase, Md.

Lebling's attorney, Barnard T. Welsh, said his client has paid back the $8000 and tried to pay Keenan's legal bill. Welsh added that Lebling has been under "great business strain" and suffers from cancer.

Judge Stedman Prescott, who heard the case, said he has known Lebling some time and was shocked to learn of the charges. The judge added that he believed the defendant had been sufficiently punished.

Character witnesses appearing for Lebling included Capt. Ernest Thompson, in charge of the Bethesda police substation; King Mularkey, Bethesda insurance man; Joseph A. Cantrel, attorney in Washington and Chevy Chase, and Carl Bachschmid, owner of a Bethesda jewelry store.

Yost Calls His Ouster Political Act

Berkeley Springs, W. Va., May 10 (AP).—An ousted Morgan County commissioner said today his removal from office was "entirely political" and that it was "within the Republican Party."

The commissioner, P. C. Yost, a prominent farmer and livestock dealer, was ordered removed by Circuit Judge D. H. Rodgers on charges that he took county property for his own use.

"You can say," Yost told a reporter, "that Mr. Yost feels he has done nothing wrong, and that he will make a reply."

He indicated that the feud within Morgan County Republican circles grew from a disagreement over the election of sheriff several years ago, and reiterated that the whole action was "entirely political."

Eleven Morgan County citizens filed a petition in Circuit Court asking Yost's removal for malfeasance in office. The petition charged that he took livestock and other articles from the county infirmary and converted them to his own use.

Yost did not appear at the hearing yesterday. Court was recessed for 30 minutes in an effort to find him when the hearing opened, but when he could not be found the proceedings were held without him.

Yost, a former sheriff of Morgan County, became a member of the county court in 1946. He is a Republican, as are all other members of the county administration except Prosecuting Attorney J. B. Helsley.

Helsley said he does not plan any criminal action in the case.

Louisiana Studies Antibetting Bill

Baton Rouge, La., May 10 (AP).—A bill to crack down on gambling by outlawing wire reports of horse racing was introduced in the Louisiana Legislature today.

Crime, Criminal Investigations & You

Judge Wilkerson pronounced sentence upon Al Capone in a death-still Federal court room . . . Eleven years—and "the word" had been that it would only be two and a half! Puzzled, like a fighting bull the instant after the matador's sword has entered its heart, the stunned Racket King swayed to his feet . . . "Judge," he said hoarsely, "you've got the wrong slant."

The Nation roared with laughter at this common criminal's revolting conception of the majesty of the law . . . But its laughter was born of its ignorance . . . The slant of which Al Capone spoke was the tilting of the scales of justice . . . He had bought and sold judges, district attorneys and the police for years, cash on the barrel head and at prevailing wholesale, gutter-side rates . . . He could have revealed easily that a part of the American way of life includes a pistol in the pocket as well as a steeple in the valley; but Capone's code—the Code of the Criminal—and not the Criminal Code on the law books—sealed his lips. Otherwise he could have stated and proven that many of the judges on the bench and the district attorneys were on his payroll, either outright or through their party.

The only difference between him and them, in his criminal mind, was that he was in the liquor racket and they were in the respectability game . . . "To blow the whistle" and expose them would have been as unethical in the criminal world in which he lived—as to turn in Jack McGurn for carrying a machine gun . . . But the cry of triumph which went up from the American people when he was jailed was as nothing compared to the sigh of relief which swept through the ranks of law enforcement officials in a dozen major American cities . . . Their relief was not that Al had gone to jail for breaking the criminal code of the U. S. but that Capone had observed the Code of the Criminal and kept his mouth shut.

The American public—and the American newspapers—pointed out that the reason for Al Capone was the horrible alliance between crime and politics . . . But Al Capone and the criminal politicians knew that it was nothing of the kind. They knew it was the $8,000,000,000 a year the American public paid Al Capone to help them break the Prohibition laws they didn't like.

The U. S. Senate is currently conducting an investigation in interstate "crime." If it follows the usual history of such explorations, it will succeed merely in publicly identifying one of the private habits of the American people, which they deplore but which they nevertheless continue to practice . . . Thus a dozen investigations into the liquor racket during Prohibition finally revealed what everyone knew—that large numbers of Americans wanted a drink and were willing to pay the man who could provide it . . . But these investigations into gambling—like those into drinking—will prove very popular, because far and away the most entertaining and useful animal in history is the scapegoat . . . The one outstanding lesson of history is that man is never more severe with his faults . . . than when he can punish them in another human being.

Psychologists do not call this hypocrisy. They call it "logic-tight compartments," and the boundaries of any logic-tight compartment are always measured by silence . . . Last week's testimony before the U. S. Senate is a perfect example. Three bookies were thoroughly mauled as common gamblers. But did you hear the Senators call the 20,000,000 Americans who bet on the Kentucky Derby criminal accomplices? Of course not—they vote . . . Did you hear the distinguished Senators denounce the great State of Kentucky for permitting the spectacle? Of course not—because Kentucky's two Senators have effective reprisal on the same Senate floor . . . Nor were the telegraph and telephone companies, which carry the betting messages—for money, of course—even mentioned. Everyone knows these great companies are run by respectable people—the very pillars of our society.

These phony sham-battles always add up to the same thing. If the Congress really wanted to stop the betting "outrage," all it would have to do is to forbid the moving of thoroughbred horses across State lines for the purpose of racing them . . . But that hasn't happened, nor is it likely that it ever will happen . . . The reason is much more fundamental than that the States will lose revenue. The reason is that a large section of the American public—too many to put in jail—like to bet on horses. To the extent that the American people like to bet, the lowly bookies are as much representative of the Nation as the distinguished Senators now interrogating them.

This is in no sense a defense of gamblers; it is simply to illustrate a very important point in public affairs. These bookies in testifying were sworn to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. But the real truth is that there is nothing respectable people hate more than the whole truth . . . It is a matter of deep congratulation to many hypocrites in any community that prostitutes, as a point of honor, never reveal their customers' names.

The periodic searches for the link between politics and crime is one of the most delightful fictions in modern American life . . . It is as close as the last politician who was asked to fix a parking ticket . . . "Everybody wants good government," LaGuardia grimly said, "applied against the other fellow, of course" . . . FDR used to say the devil in politics is very easy to identify: "He comes to you when you are tired—with the voice of your best friend asking you for a favor, which it is rank ingratitude on your part to deny. But where your gratitude begins your integrity ends" . . . Politicians are in great disrepute in the American folklore. They should be because they are reflections of the hideous side of ourselves.

Senator Kefauver of Tennessee deserves the thanks of the Nation. He will prove there are thousands of American bookmakers because there are millions of American citizens who like to bet on horses . . . But the record to be compiled by Senator Kefauver will not be complete without a notation that that other great Tennesseean, Andrew Jackson, raced a stable of thoroughbred horses under an assumed name—while he was President of the United States—and living in the White House . . . Not only that, the records clearly show that Andy's bankroll rode with his nags—and while that information won't ever make Frank Erickson President, it unquestionably makes Andy Jackson the first great Bookie.

Mother, Child Together

Plan Aids New Mother Learning Baby Care

Many hospitals have adopted the rooming-in plan, in which a mother and her new-born baby room together in a special unit. There "first-time mothers" are taught the care and feeding of the infant before the trip home in a taxicab. Reporter Carol Taylor tells, in this article, how mother and child can get off to a good start in a new life by this method.

By Carol Taylor

CHAPTER FOUR

Never in my life had I so much as diapered a baby. Yet here I was taking my own 8-day-old daughter home from the hospital.

I felt as timid and insecure as a crusty bachelor plopped down in an old maid's tea party.

In the hospital, the baby had been brought to me for daytime feedings and then wheeled back to the nursery to be attended by crack infant nurses. Papa was always shooed out of my room before little Miss Newborn made her entrance.

He had never even touched his baby until we took her home in the taxi. He had only looked at her through glass.

Fortunately, my sister, an experienced mother, was on hand when we reached home.

Certainly not all new mothers are as green as I was. But enough have complained of their problems to help inspire the rooming-in plan which is now in operation in a number of hospitals in this country.

Papa Is Not Outlawed

Rooming-in, in brief, is a plan whereby the mother and her baby room together in a special unit. The mother when she is able, tends her baby, under a nurse's supervision.

By the time mama is discharged she is an expert burper, feeder and diaperer. In some rooming-in units even papa is not outlawed. He shows up at visiting hours, and may even change a diaper himself.

The plan is also said to have definite psychological advantages.

Many mothers say that rooming-in also has disadvantages. They say they are tired after childbirth; appreciate the rest and quiet of the week or so in a hospital. Therefore the facilities are never pressed on a patient.

A pioneer in rooming-in is Grace-New Haven (Conn.) Community Hospital. There Dr. Edith Jackson, clinical professor of pediatrics and psychiatry, Yale University, directs the rooming-in project. Since 1946 this hospital has had a rooming-in plan for clinic patients and a limited number of private patients who desire it.

Go Together From Delivery

Mother and child may be together immediately after delivery, if there is a bed available in rooming-in. After birth, baby is placed in a bed with its mother and wheeled to the unit. Baby may sleep either in the adjacent nursery or beside mama's bed, as the mother and nurse think advisable.

At French Hospital, New York City, the baby accompanies its mother to the unit. For the first two or three nights, so the mother may have unbroken rest, baby sleeps in a small nursery attached to the unit.

At other times his bassinet remains beside the mother's bed. Papa is allowed in at regular visiting hours from 3 to 4 p. m. and from 7 to 8 p. m.

The mother is allowed one other visitor, but this must be the same visitor throughout her stay in the hospital. Both papa and the visitor are required to wash their hands thoroughly and put on hospital gowns before entering the unit.

The New York Hospital has a modified rooming-in plan for clinic and private patients which seems highly desirable. It allows the mother to get a good rest before she attempts to take care of the baby. The mother moves into the unit the second day after delivery and starts tending baby on the third day.

Dr. Gordon R. Douglas, obstetrician and gynecologist in chief at the hospital, said the staff has been encouraged to increase the frequency with which rooming-in is used.

"We're doing it without structural change or additional equipment," he explained. "Not spending a lot of money at this time until we have had further experience with the plan and more of a demand from our patients.

Experienced mothers, he said, like the rest a hospital stay affords them.

"It's often ideal for the new mother with her first baby who feels a little insecure and wants experience in the care of the baby, said Dr. Douglas.

Dr. Marcus Kogel, commissioner of hospitals, said he is watching development of rooming-in with a great deal of interest.

Dr. Kogel sketched a multiple maternity section and observed:

"A group of five mothers in a maternity section might have their babies at their bedside. It's better for a few mothers to be together in one unit. We can put five mothers in one unit, and they may have their babies with them."

At Grace-New Haven Community Hospital I talked to new mothers in the unit who were unanimous in favoring the idea.

One mother whose baby had been delivered the night before was waiting for a vacancy in rooming-in.

"I'm lonesome here without him," she said, referring to her new son. "I have no one to talk to. I want to feel his ears and his hands I want to take care of him."

Dr. Jackson said rooming-in is particularly advantageous in helping the mother start a natural relationship with the baby.

Many doctors are skeptical of the plan. A spokesman for one of the largest hospitals, which has not adopted rooming-in, said he was showing a European doctor through the hospital recently and asked his opinion of the plan.

The visiting doctor replied: "We got away from that 20 years ago!"

In European countries the baby crib was attached to the foot of the mother's bed. That was the custom here, too, in the old days. Pictures of maternity hospitals in the last century show the baby's bed alongside that of the mother.

Miss Lottie Morrison, assistant director of Sloane Hospital for Women, Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center, is convinced that the mother needs rest during her short hospital stay.

"If the patient can't live away from that baby for five days she should have her baby at home," said Miss Morrison, half seriously. "I would never want rooming-in unless it could be strictly private with the mother in a strictly private room with soundproof walls and an adjoining room for baby."

As a mother, I believe I'd agree with Miss Morrison.

Some People Could Call the Derby Well

By John Crosby

CLEM McCARTHY, an amiable and much beloved sports announcer, was once the best horse caller in the business. That is no small compliment. Horse calling is as rare and specialized a profession as diamond cutting. But like diamond cutting, you can't afford to make any mistakes. Lately McCarthy has been making quite a few.

The McCarthy call of the Kentucky Derby on CBS disagreed wildly with the charts of the race and also with my own observance of it by film on television the day after the race. McCarthy seemed to have trouble remembering the name of the California favorite, Your Host, and even referred to the winner, Middleground, as Middleburg. His stunned observation—"Ladies and gentlemen, believe it or not, the winner is—Middleground"—didn't sit at all well with this horseplayer (who was betting on Middleground and wasn't nearly as surprised as Mr. McCarthy that he won).

McCarthy's explanation that Middleground had caught and passed Mr. Trouble in the last 50 yards simply isn't true. Middleground had passed Mr. Trouble way ahead of that. Neither McCarthy nor his assistant, Mel Allen, who took over after the race was run, bothered to tell the horseplayers how far Middleground had won by and we had no way of knowing whether it was by a city block or by a whisker. That is inexcusable.

I repeat: horse calling is a tough racket. But the Kentucky Derby, the number one turf event in this country, ought to be called well and there are plenty of callers who can do it well.

Film of Race Fine

CBS TELEVISION broadcast films of the race the following day. Sportswriters who were at the Derby found the televised films not entirely satisfactory. I found them fine and I imagine a lot of people who were at Churchill Downs weren't sitting in seats as good as those of the sportswriters, learned a good deal about the race, too. Bryan Field, an excellent horse caller, performed this chore on the film and did, I thought, a bang-up job all the way.

Besides showing the race at regular speed from start to finish, the films also showed the highlights in slow motion, a fine idea which ought to settle a lot of arguments. One British television critic recently referred to race horses as the best actors to be seen on British television so far. This sage remark, I feel, could be applied to American television, too. In fact I can't wait until they get the coaxial cable to Louisville and we can see with our own eyes how far ahead the winner is.

My only complaint with the televised films was the title which declared in bold type: "Gillette Presents—The Seventy-Sixth Running Of The Kentucky Derby."

Shades of Matt Winn! Who presents the Kentucky Derby?

SMALL, OMINOUS portent: A quiz program called Tello-Test telephones housewives here and there, as is the wont of quiz programs, between 1:45 and 2 in the afternoon. Recently, the quizmasters Bruce Eliot and Dan McCullough, placed six calls and were taken aback when five of the people on the other end turned out to be men, one of whom had to ring off in a hurry because he was tending a baby. Eliot and McCullough have been brooding about the social structure ever since, wondering what the devil is going on in the battle of the sexes.

Incidentally, the question they asked that day was: "Who is the author of the line: 'It is later than you think'." No one knew.

GE Announces 24-Inch Tube For Television

Syracuse, N. Y., May 10 (AP).—The General Electric Company announced today that it had developed a television tube to provide a 24x18-inch picture, slightly larger than the conventional newspaper page.

The new tube is 24 inches in diameter, five larger than the biggest one now manufactured.

Dr. W. R. G. Baker, GE vice president, said production of the tube would begin at the company's Electronics Park plant here next fall, and that sets using the tube probably would be available for sale by the end of the year.

The company said no price had been established.

Engineers stated that equally large pictures previously had been provided in television receivers by the use of magnifying lenses to enlarge images on a small picture tube. However, the method resulted in loss of picture detail and brilliance, they said.

The new tube has a dark face plate which improves contrast and detail, and an aluminum-backed fluorescent screen which increases picture brightness and permits operation at lower voltages, GE said.

The DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

A Husband's Life Is Not An Easy One

The Husbands Club of Dorchester House, as noted here a few weeks ago, was formed by a group of menfolks who one day found themselves queued up in the same grocery line, shopping lists in hand.

The other day I heard that the club had formed a "Greens Committee." Suspecting that they'd banded together to buy a country club, I investigated with haste.

False alarm. The "Greens Committee" was formed to consider emergency measures on the day when all the husbands had lettuce on their lists and the grocer was out of lettuce.

GIVE-AWAYS

"One-year-old striped cat and her 2-month-old striped daughter." (Otis 7763.)

"Two black 7-week-old puppies; their mother was an aristocratic Scotch terrier." (Vienna 208-J.)

"Three healthy, housebroken pure white kittens." (Emerson 7889.)

"Housebroken black 9-week-old kitten." (Union 1421.)

"Three pretty, housebroken Maltese and white kittens, 4 months old." (Lockwood 5-3050.)

"Two male kittens, 10 and 12 weeks old." (Trinidad 2453.)

ADD NAMES

There's a physiotherapist in Alexandria, Va., named Mary Laughter.

SALESMAN

A friend of mine who is a crackerjack real estate salesman had to have his appendix out last week.

As they rolled him into the operating room, he decided that he'd better sell his car to raise enough cash to pay for the operation.

Having reached that decision, he went to work on the handiest prospect—and sold the car to the anesthetist just before going to sleep.

MISCELLANY

The New York State Department of Commerce is putting out an excellent vacation book, chock full of color pictures of sky-blue waters and pretty blondes. They'd probably give you a copy if you'd write to their local office, at 1026 17th st. nw. . . . Martin Buxbaum of Eastpines, Md., who used to be a photographer on this paper, sends in a Capital Transit pass dated May 6-12, 1934. For one buck you could ride all week and take your small children along for free . . . Now that most District Liners know that I'm not supposed to run "plugs" any more, they work out all kinds of cute devices to get 'em in anyhow. Jim Dwyer of 1601 Belvedere blvd., Silver Spring, Md., says he doesn't expect me to publicize the big St. Bernadette's Circus Carnival (daily through May 27, at Four Corners)—he just wants to invite me to attend . . . Marguarette Hedge of Agriculture's REA says: "We don't expect you to print a notice of our affair, but did you know that the Rural Electrification Administration is the only Government agency to celebrate its birthday with a banquet and dance each year? This year we gather at the Airport Terrace Room tonight to mark our fifteenth anniversary" . . . And bless me if the Police Wives' Club doesn't also sneak in a plug while my back is turned. Club president is Mrs. Forest E. Daugherty of 2801 Pennsylvania ave. se., who tells me that she doesn't know of another American city in which police wives have formed such an organization. With 150 members already enrolled, the local group is shooting for a membership of 500. Any gal who's married to a Metropolitan, White House or Park policeman is eligible to join . . . Mrs. Howard G. Oberlander of 4402 Elm st., Chevy Chase, Md., wonders "how can the funnies be funny if Winnie Winkle's husband is really dead?" . . . And Mrs. Mell Pockrass of 3039 O st. nw, points out that "one doesn't hold grits 'n' gravy on a fork in the position depicted by Saunders and Woggon in a recent Steve Roper strip" . . . The consensus among District Liners who saw the Derby seems to be that Hill Prince got a poor ride, and with better handling should be first to greet the placing judges in the Preakness.

PERSONAL NOTES

Frank Portillo, 14 Denwood ave., Takoma Park, Md.: The school which runs a class in radio repairing is Chamberlain Vocational High School. You can call them on the District switchboard (National 6000) and ask whether they again need sets to practice on. If they do, there's no charge, except for new parts used.

STAY THAT HAND

When I think I must chastise her,
I've a second thought that's wiser.
If I render daughter bitter
She won't be my baby-sitter.

Truman, Brewster Dine Secretly

By Drew Pearson

Some time before leaving on his whistle-stop trip, President Truman held a hush-hush dinner with one of his most vigorous political enemies—Senator Brewster of Maine.

Brewster

The dinner was held, not in the White House, but at the Carlton Hotel. And it was the President who inspired the meeting. He and Brewster had worked together on the old Truman committee, once had been warm friends.

Chief result of the Carlton dinner was a challenge to test out the Fair Deal. Brewster is chairman of the Republican Senatorial Campaign Committee and has the job of electing as many GOP Senators as possible next November.

Knowing this, Truman challenged: "I'll lay my program out and you lay your program out, and we'll have a showdown."

Brewster agreed.

Though they didn't actually plan it that way, part of the showdown is coming right now. Truman is now putting his policies before the public, while Brewster has been busy lining up speakers to refute him. He has already lined up Taft for a speech in Chicago, Wherry in Nebraska, Hickenlooper in Iowa, Morse in Oregon, and Congressman Keefe in Wisconsin.

Brewster says the battle, hatched over the dinner table at the Carlton Hotel, will continue until November.

Acheson's Big Problem

Before Secretary of State Acheson left for the Big Three Conference, he had a report from the Orient indicating that French Indo-China was the most vital area in preventing the spread of communism.

The report came from Ed Dickinson, ace trouble-shooter for ECA Administrator Paul Hoffman. State Department officials concur with Dickinson's views.

They believe that if communism once takes over Indo-China, then Burma, the Malays, Siam, India and Indonesia will also fall, making all of the Orient a Russian sphere of influence.

Furthermore, it is believed that this is Moscow's chief goal. For the Red army today lacks oil, gasoline, tin and rubber. All these things are to be obtained in the wealthy area lying south of French Indo-China.

That is why Indo-China is one of the toughest jobs facing Acheson and also why he met it head-on following his arrival in Paris. Here are some of the factors he still has to contend with:

1. The United States Senate is hot and bothered about China, but not Indo-China. This may be because of the well-heeled Kuomintang lobby which has spent thousands in Washington influencing Congress. Whatever the cause, when Acheson publicly proposed aid to Indo-China, he was rebuked next day by Senator George of Georgia, who wanted to know who was going to vote the money.

2. The French are a handicap. French administration of Indo-China in the past has been inefficient, corrupt, imperialistic. The natives don't like them, shoot down French troops at night if they stray a mile or so outside of towns.

3. Indo-China is split among various factions. There is no love for Emperor Bao Dai, onetime Paris playboy, whom the French have set up as ruler. There is also bitter hatred for guerilla leader Ho Chi Minh and his scorched-earth policy.

Possibly the United States could handle the situation better without the French. But that would alienate one of our oldest allies. Thus Acheson has the Senate to buck on one hand, the French on the other and the Communists all around him.

John L. Lewis Purge

John L. Lewis, Republican, has been busy backstage trying to purge a Democrat, Representative Anthony Cavalcante of Pennsylvania. Lewis is sore because Cavalcante demanded that District Four of the United Mine Workers have local autonomy and the right to elect their own officers. Cavalcante used to be a member of this local, has an excellent record in Congress and will be supported by many rank-and-file miners. However, Lewis' strong-arm men are doing their best to elect Edward Dumbault, Cavalcante's opponent.

New England Slump

The President's Council of Economic Advisers, while pleased with the recent unemployment drop, are still deeply concerned over the situation in the New England area. Throughout the Nation unemployment now averages 5½ percent, but in New England it averages around 12 percent. As a result, the council will soon set up a task force of prominent businessmen and economists, with instructions to make a thorough and intensive study of the causes and cures of New England's semidepression. This will be the first step in the Government's plan to help industrial New England get back on its feet.

ART COMES TO THE MARKET again! Our third annual Center Market City Art Show will open on May 20th, and we think you'll find it more fascinating than ever.

"Modern Art in Washington" will be the theme of the showing, and its purpose will be to discover new modern art being created in the Washington area.

Crowds always come to our showings because of their subject matter, and because of their interesting setting. But this year we expect a bigger attendance than ever, because the art will include both professional and amateur works.

THE EXHIBIT will open on May 20th, and will continue through June 15th—almost one full month. It will consist of paintings, drawings, prints, sculpture, and crafts (metalware, woodenware, ceramics and textiles).

The work of professional artists in the Washington area, amateur artists who paint for the fun of it, and student artists will be on display. Truly a cross-section of the art life in the Nation's Capital.

FIRST and SECOND place awards will be made in painting, drawing, prints, sculpture and crafts—AND a one-year scholarship will be awarded to the best work submitted by a student of a District of Columbia high school.

IN ANCIENT TIMES, the Marketplace was the center of a city's life. In Rome and Athens, the latest exploits of an army, the newest fashions, the latest works of art were all discussed.

Frankly, our art showings were patterned after the same idea. We felt that if you came down to Market to purchase the beautiful foods for your table, you should also have a chance to enjoy beautiful art. So, we presented our first art showing three years ago. They became so popular, and attracted such attention—including write-ups in national publications—that they have become an annual institution.

WE HOPE that you will enjoy "Modern Art in Washington," opening May 20th, as much as you have enjoyed our previous art showings. Come to see us, won't you?

Man must work from sun to sun, but Mother's work is never done!

Washing, ironing, scrubbing, mopping; cleaning, dusting, sweeping, shopping.

She takes her chores all in her stride, with never a pause for a brief aside.

Till once a year comes a Sunday in May. Even Mom takes a rest! it's Mother's Day!

The Hecht Co.'s ready with gifts galore,
